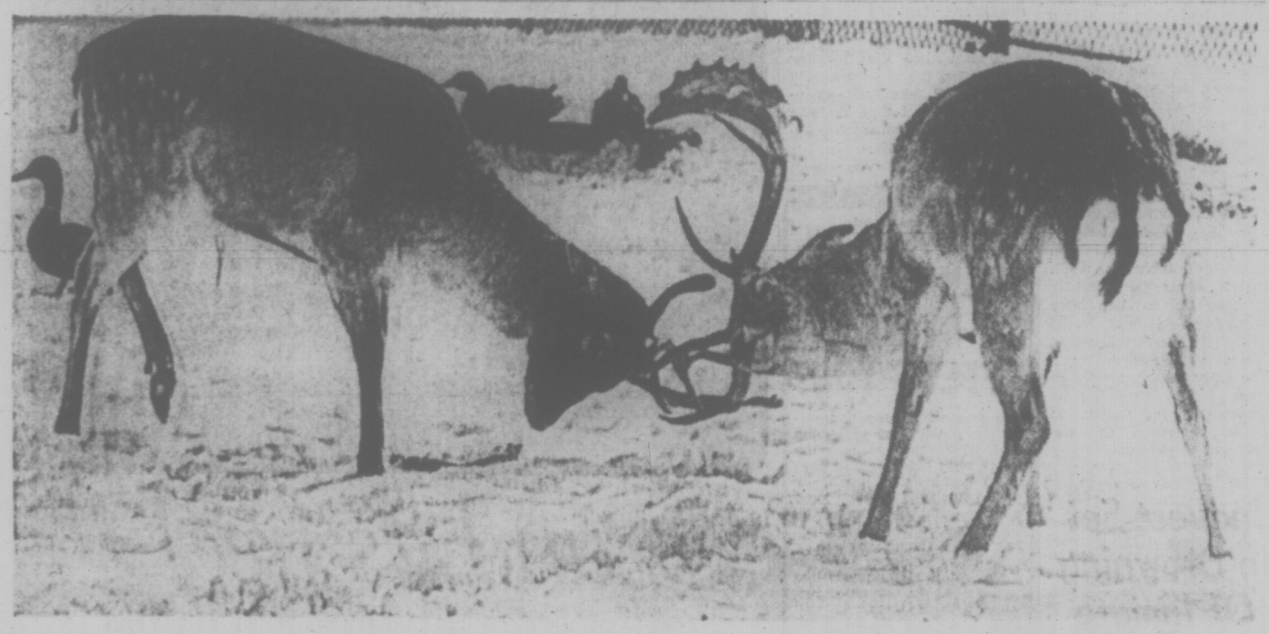
FOR MURDER OF LAPORTE

Rose Guilty, Gets Life Term



SPRING FEVER CONQUERS ALL, even snowy weather, as witness these bucks locking horns in a test battle Friday in Toronto's High Park. There was a hint of spring in the air with bright sunshine and temperatures in the 30s coming as welcome relief after a series of snowstorms which hit Ontario and Quebec this winter. (CP Wirephoto)

Could Be Free In 10 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose was sentenced to life imprisonment today after being found guilty by a Court of Queen's Bench jury of the non-capital murder of Pierre Laporte.

The jury, which began deliberations briefly Friday, entered its verdict soon after resumption of court proceedings today, winding up the seven-week trial.

Rose, 27, would become eligible for parole after serving 10 years of his life term.

Rose is the first of four persons to be tried in the kidnapping of the Quebec labor minister last Oct. 10 and his strangulation death a week later.

The seven-week trail just concluded dealt with the non-capital murder charge only.

TAKES VERDICT CALMLY

The other three — Jacques Rose, 23, Paul's brother, Francis Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19 — are to face trial on similar charges at a later date.

Rose took the verdict calmly, as though he expected it.

"Vive le Quebec libre, vive le peuple Quebecois, nous vaincrons."

In translation Rose's comments in English were: "Long live free Quebec, long live the Quebec people, we shall win."

When the 12-man jury filed into Court of Queen's Bench shortly after 10 a.m. today, Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols asked:

"Are you ready to continue your deliberations?"

TRIAL BEGAN JAN. 25

The jury foreman said: "We have reached a verdict."

The decision came after the foreman Friday had asked that deliberations be postponed until today because jurors were too tired to continue. That request came after the jury met for 25 minutes Friday.

After pronouncing the life sentence, Mr. Justice Nichols then sentenced Rose to one month for contempt of court.

Canadian Oil Corporation Seen Following Home Deal

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A multi-billion-dollar Canadian government international oil corporation could develop out of the planned acquisition of Home Oil Ltd. by the federal government, it was learned here today.

Ottawa hopes to block a United States takeover of control of Home Oil of Calgary by buying control in the company, Energy Minister J. J. Greene has disclosed in the Commons. Cost to the government of this purchase could run to $26,000,000 initially.

Out of this development may materialize the huge new Canadian government-controlled company. It would encompass Home Oil's production, exploration and pipeline assets, the government's interests in Panarctic oils, the refining capabilities of Polymer Corporation and elements of Eldorado Nuclear Limited.

The two federal Crown corporations, Polymer and Eldorado, are being consulted as the Canadian government proceeds with its negotiations to buy controlling interest of Home Oil. The directors of Panarctic are also being kept informed of the negotiations.

The bold new concept was presented to cabinet by Greene and despite some opposition he has apparently convinced the majority of the cabinet that this is the way to proceed. Sources close to cabinet said Saturday that the deal is now too far advanced to be stopped.

The Canada Development Corporation, to be established by legislation before Parliament, will participate in the formation of the giant Canadian oil company. It would act as the lynch-pin to combine elements of Crown corporations, Home Oil and the government's interests in Panarctic oils.

The bill creating the CDC is expected to be passed by Parliament this spring.

Leading the negotiations for the government in the purchase of Home Oil is Jack Austin, deputy minister of energy, mines and resources. He is conducting the talks with R. A. Brown Jr., president of Home Oil. He began negotiation to prevent the sale of Home Oil to Ashland Oil of Kentucky as early as June last year.

Pipeline Inevitable, Chretien Tells House

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Friday an Arctic pipeline is inevitable and that he will meet oil company executives within two weeks to lay down the conditions by which the line could be built through the Mackenzie Valley.

He and Energy Minister J. J. Greene will meet the presidents of the seven firms developing oil reserves on Alaska's north slope at Prudhoe Bay.

The Mackenzie Valley pipeline is the only alternative to the trans-Alaska pipeline, which would supply giant supertankers running from Valdez, Alaska, down the British Columbia coast to refineries in Washington.

Mr. Greene told the Commons the tanker route was "fraught with potential danger" from oil spills, and reiterated the government's preference for the Mackenzie Valley line.

But Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said the tanker route is inevitable. The Mackenzie line would also be likely as a secondary route.

U.S. PRESSED

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said the U.S. government is under strong domestic and international pressures to build the Alaska pipeline.

Turk Power Scramble On

ANKARA (Reuter) — President Cevdet Sunay called an emergency meeting of the Senate today as moves got under way to find a new Turkish government to replace that of Suleyman Demirel, forced out of power by army threats Friday.

After meeting the 183-member Senate, the 70-year-old president, who plans to address the country Sunday, arranged to talk with Gen. Memduh Tagmac, chief of the general staff.

The general was the man behind the armed forces threat Friday to take over the country if Demirel did not resign.

YOUNG SOLDIERS SENT HOME

Times News Services

BELFAST — Britain will withdraw about 170 troops under the age of 18 from Northern Ireland after the killing of three young off-duty soldiers this week

The order, to take effect as soon as possible, was announced Friday night by Defence Minister Lord Carrington. One of the three murdered soldiers was only 17, a second, his brother, 18, and a third, 23.

One report said the three were enticed from a saloon by girls working for the Irish Republican Army and were ambushed.

Police found their inquiries balked to a large extent by the fear of reprisals against informers instilled over the years into many sections of the population.

Tensions were high in Northern Ireland this week with fears of violence by Protestants seeking revenge against Roman Catholic districts. Leave was cancelled for most of the 8,000 British soldiers on peacekeeping operations here as the hunt for the murderers continued.

Indira, Marxists Locked in Battle

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party was locked in a close race today with the militant Marxist Communist party for control of the state assembly in violence-ridden West Bengal.

In the national parliamentary elections, Mrs. Gandhi moved toward a possible two-thirds majority that would enable her to pass constitutional amendments with ease. She has promised India's poor drastic economic and social reform.

With the results from 183 of 277 constituencies counted in West Bengal, the Congress party had won 73 seats and the Marxists 70. The remaining 40 seats already decided were shared among 14 parties that will play a major role if a coalition government is formed in the state.

Mrs. Gandhi's party made a strong showing in Calcutta and in the northern part of the state, winning 32 seats more than it held after the last general election.

EXTENDS INFLUENCE

But the Marxists swept all but one of 23 seats in agricultural and industrial areas of Burdwan district, scene of some of the worst violence. The Marxist provincial leader, who is in jail charged with murder, retained his assembly seat.

The Marxist hold in rural areas long had been considered weak but its success in Burdwan showed the party has been able to extend its influence.

BANK ROBBERS USE HOSTAGE

Girl Safe After Kidnap

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Six-year-old Amy Larson was reunited with her family Friday night after being abducted from her home in the morning and spending six hours bound up in the back of a van truck.

"About all that she would say was that she was very comfortable," said Allen G. Larson, who said his daughter had been examined by doctors and was in fine shape.

Amy was abducted shortly before the bank her father manages was robbed. A man had phoned Larson and said Amy and her mother were being held as hostages.

J. Earl Milnes, agent in charge of the Seattle FBI office, said she was found bound and gagged in the truck in a supermarket parking lot in Juanita a few miles north of here. Both towns are Seattle suburbs.

AMY
. . . happy to be home

"The men didn't abuse her," Larson said. "She said she was cold and hungry.

"The men gave her a candy bar to eat during the day."

Two men went to the Larson home about 10:30 Friday morning and were admitted by Amy while her mother, Corrine Larson, was in another room, the King County public safety department said.

They tied Mrs. Larson up and left, police said, apparently taking the family's 1956 station wagon as well as a white van truck the men were believed to have arrived in.

The station wagon, belonging to the Larsons, was found a few blocks from the bank shortly after the robbery. Larson's wife was freed by police and officers said she apparently was unharmed, although she was described as "extremely upset."

OPERATION IN LAOS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese field officers said today that the major portion of the operation in Laos will end in about two weeks but that some troops will remain at border posts.

South Vietnamese troops that were pulled back from the key Ho Chi Minh Trail village of Sepone Friday were nearing the South Vietnam border today.

. . . OIL

Thursday it became clear that no Canadian firm was prepared to step in and purchase Home Oil to block the U.S. firm's takeover of the wholly-owned Canadian oil company. When this became obvious, Greene, after getting the consent of cabinet, switched the negotiations to having the Canadian government dicker to buy control of the oil company based in Calgary.

He has stressed in the Commons that this is not a "compulsory deal" nor is it to be considered as "expropriation." The Canadian government is seeking to hammer out a deal that is "satisfactory" to Brown.

As the negotiations proceed, Greene is moving closer to his big dream of an international Canadian oil company that would be able to compete in the big leagues with other major world-encompassing oil companies.

. . . PIPELINE

Middle East, and California delivery of oil down the coast by tanker.

The speeches came in debate on a Conservative motion calling on the House to oppose the tanker route because of the pollution danger and urging the government to start an immediate feasibility study of alternatives such as the Mackenzie Valley route.

Under House rules the motion did not come to a vote.

Mr. Chretien said flatly that "pipelines will be built."

"If the Americans do not build a pipeline from Alaska I will not be too upset, because I know that we will find enough oil in the future to justify an oil pipeline."

He said economic factors would force U.S. firms to build a pipeline for natural gas, which is expensive to ship by sea.

"Perhaps factors of economy will prompt them to build an oil pipeline at the same time."

WILL CONSIDER GUIDES

The meeting with the oil company presidents will deal with the guides he and Mr. Greene set out last August for development of a line.

The guides call for maximum Canadian participation in the construction of a pipeline, access for Canadian producers, and protection of the rights of native people to get jobs on the line.

Mr. Chretien said the pipeline would be built with the "minimum damage" to the environment.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin called the Mackenzie line a "reasonable alternative" to the tanker route, which could lead to a collision turning British Columbia offshore waters into a dead sea.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) agreed on the preference for a Mackenzie Valley pipeline. He urged the government to set up a Crown corporation to operate oil and gas transportation.

CANADIAN FUNDING OK

Mr. Chretien said he had no objection to funding the $5 billion gas and oil pipeline completely in Canada.

"But I am not a Social Crediter, and I know we don't print money. And if we are to spend $5 billion on the construction of a pipeline we must first discover what the effect will be on other sectors of our economy."

Mr. Greene denied opposition claims that the government has not done enough research on the environmental and social effects of a Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

While problems remained, the government had set up research units as soon as oil was discovered in Prudhoe Bay in 1968.

Technical, environmental, economic and social effects had been studied.

Moreover, in the wake of hearings on the Alaska line in the U.S., "there now is great doubt as to whether the Valdez line will, in fact, be the first line and there is a possibility that the Mackenzie line could be the first line built."

"If it is preferable, then we must make our decision and attempt if we can, to ensure that that will be the line that is going to carry these northern resources."

SAFE SYSTEM CLOSE

He said a 15-firm group running pipeline tests at Inuvik, N.W.T., was close to finding a safe pipe system.

Mr. Greene said U.S. officials regard speed as crucial. The Mackenzie line would be chosen if it could be built more quickly and pierce Canadian regulatory barriers sooner than U.S. regulations.

"It is incumbent upon us I believe to expedite our procedures to the best of our ability without rushing into something that is so important to Canada's future."

Unjust Arrests

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette told the national assembly Friday that compensation will be provided to persons unjustly arrested during the October kidnap crisis.

Shadow Mischief

Dock Men to Vote On Pay Proposals

Federal dockyard workers will meet at 4:30 p.m. Sunday to hear and vote on details of a tentative agreement for a new 30-month contract.

The meeting will take place at the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra, said E. M. Langhamer, treasurer of the Esquimalt local of the Federal Government Dockyards Trades and Labor Council.

Langhamer said he does not know details of the tentative agreement which will be voted on by 3,000 union members in Victoria and Halifax.

Halifax dockyard workers went on strike last Monday to protest a lower wage offer to them than to Esquimalt workers.

The Esquimalt local was to go on strike Monday.

Tom Graham, president of the Esquimalt local, who has been in Ottawa for the past week, said Friday he is "satisfied" with the tentative agreement.

Graham was on his way home today to be present for the Sunday meeting.

The original wage offer from the federal treasury board would have raised hourly rates for Halifax workers from $3.31 to $3.89 by October, 1971, compared with a raise of $4.16 to $5 for Esquimalt workers.

Treasury board president C. M. Drury told the Commons Friday the disparity in the government's offer reflected the unequal pay rates that exist across the country.

LOVE Backers Get Bargains In Aristocracy

Victorians will be able to buy their way into a new aristocracy.

The Victoria Days Society plans to introduce a founding members hierarchy in the Loyal Order of Victorian Enthusiasts which will be open to individuals, businesses and organizations.

For $100 each, or two names per scroll for $150, citizens can buy ranks "High Court Captain" or "Lady in Waiting." Squire of the Manor" or "Madam of the Manor" go for $25, or two names per scholl at $37.50.

Other ranks can be had for as little as $5 from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber does not plan to market the scrolls in succeeding years.

In other Victoria Days activity a 14-year-old boy has won the festival's song contest over 41 other entries.

Stephen Hatfield, son of Royal Roads Padre Don Hatfield was presented with the winner's script at a recent breakfast meeting of the Victoria Days Committee. A composer for the past three years, Stephen plays piano and organ, but lists the drums as his favorite instrument.

Common-Law Wife 'Hurt' By B.C. Law

Many government acts discriminate against the common-law wife, an opposition MLA charged in the legislature Friday.

Among them are those related to taxation and succession, said Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East), speaking in debate on second reading of a bill to amend the Testator's and Family Maintenance Act.

He said that the bill, which would allow written statements of a decreased person to be entered in evidence at a court hearing about a will, did not deal with the real problems to be found in the act.

Although a common-law wife may have served her husband devotedly for years, in B.C. she is "treated as a non-person."

Minister without portfolio Patrica Jordan praised the bill, noting that without it there would be danger of courts rewriting wills.

Syndicate Buys Firm

A syndicate of eight employees and Cornat Industries Ltd. have been successful in a bid to take over the trucking firm of Johnston Terminals and Storage Ltd.

James Methven, vice-president and general manager, who heads the syndicate, said the bid was accepted Friday. The offer is worth a total of $6,715,667.

None of the employees involved in the takeover are Victorians, Charles Ruttan, Victoria manager, said.

Methven and Murray Brink, company president, said two other foreign-controlled firms, offered to take over the syndicate. They were pleased the B.C. takeover bid was successful.

Harbor Renewal Funds Will Come—Haddock

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock is confident the Inner Harbor urban renewal project will get some of the $3.5 million in federal funds destined for Vancouver.

Vancouver Ald. Harry Rankin said Friday Victoria will lose out on the federal funds, despite Municipal affairs Minister Dan Campbell's promise Wednesday that the Inner Harbor project would get priority unless Vancouver submitted final plans on its projects by April 30.

"I don't believe that, not until the last T is crossed," Haddock said today.

"Making the application is one thing, having a satisfactory project is another."

Victoria's urban renewal plans include purchase of the Ocean Cement site on Wharf Street which is to be used for a park and public marina.

Vancouver's plans include renovation of 1,000 old houses and construction of a community recreation complex.

Rankin said Campbell raised Victoria's hopes unnecessarily because there is no way Vancouver can miss the April 30 deadline.

"He knows how advanced our plans are; we have had lots of negotiations with his department."

Ald. Harold Olafson, chairman of the city's community development committee, also discounted Rankin's remarks.

DECISION

"I feel that the minister will make the final decision and he will take into consideration the fact that Victoria is the capital of the province," Olafson said.

"The Inner Harbor project is probably the most important thing for Victoria in the next decade; we need federal urban renewal funds to keep the downtown area alive."

. . . ROSE

Sentencing on the contempt citiation had been postponed regularly throughout the remainder of the trial, which began Jan. 25. Rose had acted as his own defence lawyer for most of the period.

His mother, who has been attending the trial fairly regularly, was present in court today. She said in the corridor later that the trial and sentence had been unjust.

The late Quebec cabinet minister was kidnapped from outside his suburban St. Lambert home Oct. 10. He was strangled a week later and his body was found in the trunk of an abandoned car at a nearby St. Jubert airport.

The all-male jury retired at 4 p.m. Friday to being its deliberations but after 25 minutes requested the adjournment to today.

Inquest Set In Drowning Of Inmate

Navy divers Friday recovered the body of a William Head prison inmate who was washed out to sea Thursday.

Jack Curley, 26, of Tofino, was found in shallow water in a crevice in some underwater rocks not far from the spot where he disappeared.

In inquest into the death of the inmate will be held before Greater Victoria District Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre in Sands' chapel Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Officials of the minimum security instituton said Curley slipped on wet rocks and fell into sea while walking with four other men along the shoreline.

Curley was said to have been serving a four-year-term and had been at William Head for about one year. Prison officials did not disclose the nature of the offences for which Curley had been sentenced.

Uvic Sets Land Aside For Skylarks

The University of Victoria may soon provide a suitable home for its harassed skylarks.

A committee established to study a location for a natural habitat has recommended that a 20-acre tract of land on the northwest corner of the campus be prepared as a nesting site for the skylarks.

The land known as the Barnes property is undeveloped and likely to remain so for a number of years.

The birds, common only to South Vancouver Island and a familiar sight in Gordon Head are in danger of being squeezed out by landscapers who have gradually turned campus grounds into lawns. They prefer grassy areas.

Dr. Jeremy Tatum, chairman of the committee, has suggested the Barnes site be plowed as an experiment to see if the skylarks prefer plowed fields as nesting sites.

If this is proved successful, it would be possible to continue a more detailed study of the habits of the skylark and create an environment conducive to increasing the population, he said.

Plasterers Sign Early

Members of Local 450 Plasterers' union representing Vancouver Island have accepted a contract settlement negotiated earlier this week by mainland plasterers, nearly two months in advance of an April 30 current contract expiry date.

Construction Labor Relations Association reports the settlement of 1971 negotiations adds 45 cents to the $4.75 hourly rate, 10 cents to the current 15 cents health and welfare benefit.

It was the third construction union to sign a contract this year, observed CLRA president C. J. Conaghan, who added: "There are a few trouble spots. It's impossible to predict just how troublesome they will become."

B.C. Tel Spends $64,000 at Sooke

The B.C. Telephone Co. will spend $64,000 for an addition to the Sooke central office on Sooke Road and for additional switching equipment.

L. A. Huxtable, district customer services manager, said the building addition will be finished by the end of May. The switching equipment, worth $27,000, is needed to meet growth in the Sooke area and will be installed by the end of July.

Pension Increase 'Paltry'

Debate on controversial teachers' pension legislation opened in the legislature Friday with New Democrats calling for a better break for retired teachers.

The debate was adjourned by Resources Minister Ray Williston after he indicated the government can't increase pensions for retired teachers without doing the same for retired civil servants and municipal employees.

The B.C. Teachers Federation has threatened a strike over the issue unless changes are made in the bill.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) said pension increases for retired teachers work out to a maximum of about $21.

"That's a pretty paltry sum when you consider how long people have worked," he said.

Cocke said the New Democrats welcome a number of proposed changes in the pension bill, including a reduction in the salary averaging period and a lifting of the earning ceiling.

But of the proposed increases for retired teachers, Cocke said: "This bill ignores the old people in this province ... this government is unprincipled in this regard."

Williston reviewed the history of the pension plans for teachers, civil servants and municipal employees, pointing out that government contributions had been made on a comparable basis for all three groups.

SOME ARE BETTER

In many cases the pensions for retired teachers are better than those for the others, he said, asserting that the government couldn't improve the position of retired teachers without doing the same for the others.

He indicated opposition to putting new drains on the pension fund, saying the teachers had had enough experience of drained funds in years past.

Cocke said the NDP supports both the civil service pension changes and those for the municipal employees, partly on the basis that those groups have indicated satisfaction with the proposals of the government.

The debate may continue in the legislature Monday.

Hearing Aid Bill Rapped By Opposition Parties

New Democrats and Liberals joined forces in the legislature Friday to oppose a government bill setting up a board for the regulation of the hearing-aid business.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) led the attack against the bill, which he said would set up an industry-controlled board with power to restrict competition and keep prices high.

His call for hearing aids to be included as a service under the medicare plan was supported by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer.

Scott Wallace (S.C.—Oak Bay) said hearing aids for the elderly should eventually be a medicare item, but said there are higher priorities in health care.

The bill, described as unique in Canada by Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson, passed second reading by a 35-14 vote.

Dudley Little (SC—Skeena) said his personal experience with a hearing aid caused him to doubt the value of more competition for its own sake. The highly specialized needs of the hard-of-hearing requires more skilled medical advice rather than more selling pressure, he said.

New Democrats said they weren't doubting the need for better standards in the industry, which the bill is designed to enforce.

"Give me one example of where a sort of closed shop, pseudo-professional society has lowered its prices ..." said Bill Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet).

Macdonald said good hearing devices could be imported from Japan at great savings and made available to people who need them, instead of putting industry control in the hands of "a cosy trade association."

Socreds defended the bill, saying the opposition members should know better than to doubt that Mrs. Dawson, who introduced the bill, would do other than protect the rights of elderly persons who are most subject to exploitation in the hearing-aid business.

ORGANIZED CRIME INVASION FEARED

Fear that organized crime is about to invade B.C. was raised in the legislature Friday during discussion of a bill that would require registration of mortgage brokers and full disclosures of mortgage costs.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the bill didn't provide for disclosure of the "true owners" of mortgage brokerage corporations.

He said the names of Panamanian or Bahamian corporations would mean nothing to the public.

"How can you protect yourself against an unknown enemy?" he asked.

Macdonald said organized crime and the Mafia were being attracted to British Columbia because of "usurious interest rates" in the province.

"They're going to increase and the invasion will be on in B.C."

He urged the government to "force the real owners to stand up."

BARRETT

MLA Thump Welcomes NDP Chief

Opposition leader Dave Barrett (NDP — Coquitlam) returned to the legislative assembly Friday to desk-thumping applause from both sides of the house and a welcome from Premier Bennett.

"I am very happy as house leader to welcome the leader of the position back to the house," Bennett rose to say after the applause had died.

Pre-Marital Counselling, Six-Week Wait Urged

He made the suggestion during a brief discussion of a bill, introduced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, which proposed revision of the marriage act.

The revision, Loffmark said, would change the present waiting period of three full days following registration of a marriage to three days including the registration day.

Barrett, who stressed he was making personal comments, said he thought the legislation might be "a step back."

He said the state dealt with marriage and divorce and it should provide pre-marital counselling because this was a function of the family that has been abdicated in modern times.

"Marriage can be an impetuous move," he said, and urged the government "to see that the opportunity for serious thought" was provided.

"Love is a great thing. I wouldn't want to knock it."

But he said if the state provided a six-week waiting period with pre-marital counselling, "some of the marriages that now contribute to the divorce rate of one out of three would not have taken place."

"If the state presumes to interfere at either end of the marriage," he said, it should provide counselling services.

Further discussion was adjourned until next sitting of the house.

BUYER PROTECTED

Changes in the provincial Consumer Protection Act were approved in principle by the legislature Friday, but not before a Socred MLA suggested the government should have as much concern for cash-paying customers as for credit-buyers.

George Mussallem (SC — Dewdney) said he approved of the bill's increased protection for people who buy on time, but added:

"Who holds the hand of the man that pays cash? Let us not be too particular about the man who pays on time to buy more than he can afford."

The bill ensures that in cases where a time-payment contract is sold by a retailer to a finance company, the finance company is required to stand behind all the guarantees and other obligations in the contract.

Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) reminded Mussallam that people who can afford to pay cash don't have any problem with assigned contracts and can go directly to the seller for satisfaction on goods received.

Better Justice in the Courts

THE FEDERAL GOVERNment's Bail Reform Bill which is now in the final stages of passage through Parliament should create far-reaching improvement in Canada's treatment of persons brought before the courts. As Justice Minister Turner described it to a recent audience: "It will bring about fundamental changes in the law relating to the powers of arrest and the release from custody before trial of accused persons."

The Bill has four main purposes. The first is to avoid unnecessary arrest and detention before trial. Second, it will ensure that regardless of his means, an arrested person will not be unnecessarily kept in detention while awaiting his trial; third, that those in custody will get an early trial; and fourth, that courts will be given statutory guidelines for making decisions in regard to arrest and bail.

The old criticism of many courts in Canada, that accused persons with money get bail while poor people must wait in jail, should become a thing of the past when this legislation goes into effect. It is hoped through this Bill that every accused and convicted person will feel that he has been fairly treated. That fact alone should assist greatly in his rehabilitation.

So far as bail is concerned, the new legislation would ensure that an accused person would normally be released merely by signing an undertaking to appear in court when required. Anything more than this would have to be justified by the prosecutor. Pre-trial detention would be justifiable only in cases where it appeared that the accused person would not turn up for his trial or that he was likely to be a danger to society in the interim.

One of the safeguards in the proposed regulations is that it will be up to the police to initiate bail procedures, not the prisoner, who may not know all his rights. The police, indeed, are not to arrest a person if less severe measures will be sufficient. As Mr. Turner puts it: "The provisions of the bill will eliminate, to a great extent, detention before trial, and the inherent injustice of identical treatment of innocent and guilty" in police cells.

The new legislation should largely eradicate the injustices which all too frequently become evident in our present system. It is greatly to the credit of Judge William Ostler, and to the benefit of the people of this community, that much of the spirit and the effect of the new legislation has for some time been implemented in Greater Victoria's Provincial Court. Now the hand of enlightened judges will be strengthened in preventing injustices in the sequence of arrest, charge, trial, and disposition of the case. The legislation is an excellent example of a sensible approach to an important social problem.

Pollution Havens

IN THE COURSE OF A SPEECH to the Industrial Developers Association of Canada in which Mr. Philip Givens, the former mayor of Toronto and now a member of Parliament, urged national anti-pollution standards, Mr. Givens brought up the disturbing possibility that some parts of the country might be willing to create "pollution havens" to attract industry.

That some parts of the country wish to emulate smoggy Toronto and Hamilton in the search for economic security is clear enough. An extension of this search could create industrial conditions to circumvent anti-pollution legislation elsewhere. Mr. Givens' remarks also point to the possiblity that anti-pollution measures may be detrimental to the short-term economic interests of parts of Canada which are yearning for industry. These areas are striving to bring their standards of living up to that of metropolitan areas.

The pollution problem and its resolution can be seen as a complication of the old Canadian problem of regional disparities in economic levels. While the pursuit of national standards of environmental improvement should not be slowed down to appease special interests, the situation should prompt a greater national effort to level out these disparities.

Teacher Candidates

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNment has wisely altered a proposed amendment to the school act and has left to the voters the right to decide if they want school teachers to be school trustees in districts outside that in which they are employed.

Mr. Brothers' amendment had apparently been designed to prevent a conflict of interest, where a teacher helps to set teachers' pay scales, even though for a neighboring district. A large proportion of teachers on a school board probably would distort its balance and effectiveness, but one or two could bring helpful professional opinion to decisions. This has, indeed, been the case in a number of instances. The public always has the final say through the medium of the ballot box.

Mr. Brothers has given consideration to these aspects, no doubt, recognizing that the inherent rights of citizenship should not be taken from an individual without compelling reason. Second thought has brought about a better decision.

Slower, But It's New

FROM SHREWSBURY, England, comes the delightful story of the garbage collection crew which defied the modern efficiency expert. The expert had devised a better system of collecting the garbage. Instead of each man fetching a can from a house, emptying it into a truck and carrying it back again, the expert said, the team ought to move ahead of the truck, bring the cans out to the street and have them there when the truck rolled up.

Stan Gregory and his crew didn't agree. While the expert held stop-watches on the various groups, Stan and his boys went about their business the old way. When times were compared, the Gregory squad had done its job half an hour ahead of those working on the "improved" system. So Gregory and his mates were allowed to continue in their old-fashioned way, while the others were put on the new method.

It took longer for them, but theoretically it was more efficient, and above all, it was new. Why, under such circumstances, put up with the old method, even if it seemed to do the job better?

Worthwhile Project

Surely an article appearing in a recent issue of your paper concerning the probability of the Smile Show being cancelled or curtailed this summer, concerns every resident of Greater Victoria.

Repeatedly we hear that the tourist business is one of the chief interests of this city, and so surely everything possible should be done to encourage any worthwhile project, and it is common knowledge that Jerry Gosley and his young performers have done tremendous work, over many years, in bringing tourists to this city, and consequently adding dollars to the city's income.

It seems to me that rather than put obstacles in the way of the show, everything possible should be done to help and encourage it.

I heartily agree with Mr. Sam Lane of the Tourist Bureau that the Smile Show is something we should not lose or cut short. It is of great value to Victoria and the visitors.—Emily Sartain, 1030 Cook.

An Opportunity the Government Tossed Away

THE Canadian government is said to be an unequalled master of propaganda. Again and again it steals the headlines from under the nose of a sleepy opposition. With some corrosive wise-crack or Gallic shrug the prime minister turns a crisis into a joke. His mixture of pleasantry and insult is good enough, no doubt, for the daily game of politics, it infuriates his enemies and comforts his back benches but it does him less than justice and it fails to make the government's case in great affairs.

Hutchison

At the moment the nation's greatest domestic concern is the riddle of inflation combined with unemployment. You would expect, under these conditions, that a man as able and articulate as Mr. Trudeau would use the first opportunity to explain what his government is trying to do about this grim paradox.

Instead, when the perfect opportunity appeared, when he recently confronted the labor unions face to face, he made no explanation, no case, no real argument at all. His critics left the conference rejoicing in a victory of propaganda, a victory by the government's default.

Perhaps there is some strategy behind Mr. Trudeau's silence. If so, the strategy is too subtle for the public to grasp. At any rate, it escapes my simple mind.

Or perhaps the government considers its case so good that it needs no defence, its political prospects so strong that it can win the next election by the opposition's default. If so, the government is sick with arrogance, that terminal disease of politicians. Most likely, the government is just too busy, worried and tired to bother.

Obvious Questions

Its case, if anyone cared to make it, is flawed, like all governmental performance everywhere, but better than you might suppose from the prime minister's strange indifference. While the economic paradox cannot be discussed in detail here, a few obvious questions, if anyone cared to ask them, would illuminate it.

What would have happened to Canada, its foreign trade, its whole economy and the savings of its people if the government had not attacked inflation, if prices had continued to rise at the ruinous earlier rate?

Why, if inflation is a certain cure for unemployment, as the Canadian Labor Congress asserts, does the United States suffer from both at the same time?

And if a little inflation is a good thing, as the Congress also asserts, how can any government cool the fire, once it has been deliberately ignited, without being forced, at some point, to use the very methods of restraint that the Congress denounces?

Mr. Trudeau could have asked these questions when he met with the labor leaders. He could have proved factually that our situation, bad as it looks for the time being, is better than that of most countries and would have been far worse today if he had not acted boldly a year ago.

He could have claimed rightly, as I see it, that a basic readjustment, painful as it is, has avoided a more serious disaster.

He could have admitted, and been stronger for his frankness, that his timing had not been perfect, that his advisers, and every economist in the world, had misjudged the paradox, that every government had mishandled it, most of them more lamentably than the government of Canada.

In short, he could have levelled with the public and trusted its intelligence. But he didn't.

The government's innumerable image makers and press agents may think that they have already made the case. If this is what they think, they are not earning their pay, as most taxpayers suspect anyhow.

Or if Edgar Benson thinks that he has made the case by issuing endless unread statistics and uttering his soporific speeches in Parliament, he overestimates the public's attention-span when so much better free entertainment is available on television.

Honest and Dull

The finance minister, though I have never met him, seems to be a fine and honest man who fears nothing and adds up everything in neat mathematical sums — the kind of man who, if the world is finally destroyed by nuclear bombs, will prove, next day, by unquestionable figures, that the destruction is only 99 and not 100 per cent when seasonally adjusted. As a statistician Mr. Benson may be a towering success. As a propagandist he is a flop; worse, a bore.

Mr. Trudeau, despite his faults, is never a bore. He can always hold the public's attention but, deliberately or by default, he has not held it on the economic facts and should not be surprised if his enemies often get away with non-criminal murder.

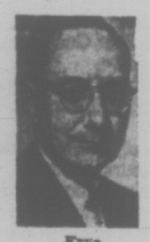
New Dimensions to War From Chou En-lai's Visit

DISCLOSURE this past week that Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and a high-level group of aides spent four days in Hanoi has added a new dimension of seriousness to the Indo-China war.

It need not be assumed that a decision on active Chinese intervention was sought, or reached. But the trip could scarcely have avoided discussing the conditions under which such intervention would take place. The South Vietnamese assault on the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos represents, for Hanoi, a very serious peril. The principal lifeline for her troops is being disrupted.



Frye

Moreover, there have been repeated hints from Saigon and Washington that an invasion of North Vietnam is not ruled out. This would be a contingency in which Hanoi almost certainly would wish, if necessary, to be able to call on China for help.

Thus it is inconceivable that the possibility of employing Chinese manpower in the war in given circumstances was not at least considered. This is a matter of concern not merely for the United States and South Vietnam, but for the Soviet Union as well. It represents a danger which has long given Moscow pause: that Chinese influence will become dominant in much or all of Southeast Asia, to the exclusion not merely of the West but of the Soviet Union as well.

If China Moves In

The United States is moving out of Indo-China. If China moves in, Moscow could be left holding the bag, with little or nothing to show for the millions it has invested in Hanoi.

It would be logical for the Kremlin to take two protective measures: (1) to create a military diversion which would help inhibit a Chinese move south; and (2) to press for a negotiated compromise to end the war.

A serious border incident, or series of border incidents, along the Sino-Soviet frontier would do much to tie Peking down and discourage a major deployment south.

It is in the Soviet Union's power to heat up China's northern front to the point where an adventure to the south would be highly inadvisable.

Whether Soviet diplomatic pressure for a meaningful peace negotiation — for example, a new Geneva-type conference — would be equally decisive in the non-military arena is less clear.

Moscow may not be able to "deliver" Hanoi to a genuine peace table. But an effort to do so, preferably in public, would be a highly important and influential act, affecting calculations in every major chancellory of the world.

The choice it would intensify for Hanoi would be between accepting, on the one hand, through diplomacy, a less than satisfactory outcome to a decades-long military campaign, and submitting, on the other hand, to domination by China in order to go on fighting.

This is, in fact, already Hanoi's dilemma. For Russia to plump for negotiated compromise, and China to press for continued warfare, would be to bring the choice into painfully sharp focus.

Western and neutral diplomats could also help to encourage the right decision. They could not persuasively argue that Hanoi has a chance to win control of the South at the conference table; that is not negotiable, and Hanoi must know it.

But they could help persuade Hanoi that the outcome which is negotiable — peace, neutralism, economic co-operation, the eviction of a western military presence — would be an acceptable alternative for Southeast Asia.

Big Task of Persuasion

It should not be impossible, given the present and prospective military balance, to persuade Hanoi to acquiesce in such an outcome. But the effort will require all-out participation by everyone with a fragment of influence in North Vietnam, and above all by the Kremlin.

Nothing commends a Korean-style Chinese intervention in Indo-China, and much militates against it.

It would be contrary to the direction of recent Chinese policy, which has been to seek more nearly normal relations with the West, with the UN, and with the uncommitted third world.

It would provide an early, and supreme, test for that part of the Nixon Doctrine which promises American help to countries which are confronted by an overwhelming challenge by a nuclear power.

It could even provoke a major return of American power to Southeast Asia, something which virtually no one — except perhaps Saigon — can wish.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If you take a circle drive out along the Sooke Road and through the Humpback Road you can find many changes.

After you cross the railway tracks at Luxton you may see how the gorse is taking over and is now in bloom. The long, thin leaves are sharp-pointed. It is an introduced plant and belongs to the legume family.

Beside the road are lodge-pole pines and several clumps of hazel. This will tell you that you are on a well-drained, gravelly soil.

Stop along the old Dewdney flats that used to be a market garden but now is a marsh, taken over by the willows, hardack and the alders. Among the many clumps of coarse grasses the water is shallow and provides a wonderful feeding ground for the "puddleducks," of which there are large numbers. Here you can spot mallards, widgeons and teal.

The old barn standing under the hill is starting to fall apart, yet it would make a picture for a "shutter-bug." Close by, where the land is a little dryer, sheep graze, amongst them some little black lambs, making another pastoral scene.

At the west end of the flats, where a few years ago the alders were thick, they are beginning to thin out as the formerly wet land changes to one suitable for conifers that are now taking hold. In due time, if not disturbed, a mixture of cedars and hemlock will be established.

This type of land is beneficial to many forms of wild life and provides a habitat for certain kinds of plants that can only survive in marshy soil. It also provides a basin for storing water.

Just before you turn off on the Humpback Road there are some very fine specimens of flowering dogwood. Soon they will be a blaze of glory, the white flowers showing brightly against the dark green leaves that are much lighter on the underside.

Along the gravel road there is a very sharp contrast. Here the trees overhang the roadway and you can find a number of hemlocks mingled with some very fine red alders. There are also some willows now shedding their pollen.

A little stream that runs beside the road sings its song as it tumbles its way to the sea. Beside the stream many old stumps have two or more "spring-board-notches" cut into them, recalling the days of the old time logger with his long-bladed falling saw and double-bitted axe.

Beside the road in a small clearing one encounters a surprise, for here are growing some yellow crocuses, daffodils and other garden plants. No doubt someone dumped some garden refuse along the way and now these plants have invaded the bushland.

Beside the road the old water pipeline from Sooke snakes around the rock bluffs like some giant green snake, adding to the attraction of a region away from the rush of traffic.

FROM THE LEGISLATURE

Maybe It's Wise to Get Kicked Out of This Shrill House

By BRUCE YEMEN

A Victoria mother reports that after she promised to take her young son to watch the legislature in action, he became really eager to go and see what he called "the fights."

It's quite possible the young fellow was disappointed when he made the visit, because the legislature does have periods of refreshing peacefulness.

But the boy had it figured pretty well. The B.C. chamber is undoubtedly Canada's fightingest legislature.

Political scientists might say the sharp conflict in B.C. politics is an outgrowth of deeper divisions in B.C. society.

The consistency with which the CCF-NDP political party has polled more than 30 per cent of the popular vote in the province over the years shows a strong base for that party.

The province also has a powerful social group of clearly conservative leanings. The makings are there for a pretty basic battle.

The conflict prospects are improved by the fact that legislative sessions are just about the only time outside of political party conventions and election campaigns when opposition parties can get massive coverage for their points of view.

The result is that opposition MLAs everywhere try to make the best of legislative sessions to score political points.

They know that during the rest of the year the government has a natural and overwhelming advantage when it comes to spreading its ideas to the people.

The shorter the sessions, the harder the opposition battles to score points. The harder the effort, the shorter the tempers become.

A government has a clear choice in dealing with that sort of situation.

It could try to moderate the conflict by making the legislature a truly democratic institution which makes the best use of the talents of members of all parties.

It could hold at least two sessions a year to take the pressure off opposition MLAs to make frantic political hay while they can. Politics could be conducted on a rational basis much of the time.

But a government led by a clever man might decide to throw fuel on the political fires by running the legislature in a chain-gang style, putting intense pressure on MLAs in a ruthless effort to get the government's program through the mill as fast as possible.

This tactic would not only shorten the period of conflict but it would frequently intensify it to a point where it became unreal to the voters, who would develop a justifiably dim view of goings-on in the legislature.

This public attitude would serve as an effective devaluation of opposition criticism of government policies. The good arguments would get tarnished along with the bad.

An opposition faced with a situation like that would have two main alternatives:

One would be to fight even harder than before, touching off more and more bitter confrontations.

The other would be to cool things a bit and risk seeming ineffective in the legislature in order to tone down the shrill level of politics that had proved so useful to the government.

An opposition leader following the second plan might well decide that the legislature had been so damaged as a political battleground that it might be useful occasionally to get himself calmly thrown out of the place on matters of simple principle.

It might be the only way he knows for shifting the political spotlight away from the floor of the legislature and out into the real world where people cast their votes.

Such an unorthodox approach might well cause some difficulty in convincing all of his party members that he was doing the right thing.

Of course, these sorts of things could go on without any conscious planning at all by either a premier or a leader of the opposition. They could happen by chance.

The record of Premier Bennett as a political operator suggests that chance plays less of a role in his successes than in any other Canadian politician's.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett has a good record as a smart constituency politician, but only time will suggest how much effective scheming he is bringing off on the province-wide level.

But there is another hard question, and that is whether it would be more disturbing if the kinds of things described here have occurred by a series of melancholy accidents, or by design.

Either way, it's not a very happy picture. But it would at least be more interesting to baffled onlookers to think that some major new test of political wits is under way.

Blessed Are Old and Meek for They Shall Get Nothing

By GEORGE OAKE

All dressed in plastic and worsted, 500 members of the B.C. old-age pension organization milled about and squinted through the rain at that pompous building housing democracy in British Columbia.

Some eyed the splendid staircase leading into the rotunda with apprehension born of arthritic limbs.

But with the determination that has lined faces into maps of old age they attacked the broad stairs.

It was to be a day of considerable irony.

To find out some of the reasons why the old people pursed their lips for the long climb it is necessary to go back to Ottawa a week before Christmas 1970.

On Dec. 17 the government passed a bill that set the basic old-age pension at $80 a month for all those 65 and over, and increased the guaranteed annual supplement to a maximum of $55 from $30 for those in need.

The $38.60 provincial social welfare supplementary allowance, of which Ottawa pays half, adds a little more to the pot of the old and needy.

Not too bad, you say? But what if you have to buy a hearing aid — a device that costs upwards of $325 here, yet sells for one third the cost in Britain? And what about costly medicines or the inevitable rise in the cost of living?

Inflation was the Catch 22 in Ottawa's apparent munificence towards the elderly. Sure, pensions went up as of April 1, this year, but the old two per cent yearly increase to compensate for cost of living increases is gone. Basic pensions remain frozen at $80 per month, while inflation melts away small pension gains.

When the federal bill was passed Health Minister John Munro said — perhaps in a philosophical mood — that with four million Canadians living in poverty the government has to be selective in distributing benefits.

Selective or not, old people are feeling the pinch. On the provincial level they want reduced nursing home costs, free medical prescriptions, exemption from school taxes and a more generous bus pass system.

The Social Credit government knows all this, of course. But on a rainy day in mid-session it did not expect 500 old people would actually come to the legislature to talk about grievances.

That became obvious when a Department of Forestry meeting was quickly shunted out of the provincial museum's Newcombe auditorium to make room for the pensioners.

Carrying umbrellas rather than placards, the strange demonstration straggled into the museum — an expensive monument to the past, the cost of which might have eased some of the living historical memories present that day.

But government priorities work in strange ways, as the pensioners found out when the politicians addressed them in the auditorium.

Social Credit Minister Without Portfolio Isobel Dawson promised to meet the pensioner's executive and offered tea and sympathy in the cafeteria to others. She received polite applause and somebody whispered, "We must remember to thank her."

No militancy here.

Effervescent Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, lit up like a 1,000-watt bulb, traded homilies with the group.

"How many people here are of Scottish ancestry?"

"How many people have been to Victoria before?"

All kinds of hands went up and someone whispered, "Isn't he nice."

"Anything I can do for you, just come and see me."

Silver Threads Director

DAWSON
. . . tea and sympathy

Catherine Horne brought the meeting back to semblance of reality saying, "Don't you leave here until you make your wishes known."

Looking ill-at-ease and in a hurry to return to the sitting legislature, Liberal Leader Pat McGeer told them what they wanted to hear.

". . . the people who worked and struggled in those (depression) days were you."

". . . nobody was mollycoddled. . . ."

There was something vaguely distasteful and patronizing about these speeches. Social Credit offered tea and cookies; the Liberal leader played on stagnant sentiment and Haddock played to the gallery.

At least New Democratic Party Leader Dave Barrett was sincere. He described his private members bill that would give any B.C. resident, 65-years or over, with total income less than $200 a month, an allowance to bring his or her income up to $200 a month, although he admitted the bill did not have a chance of becoming law.

It is interesting to note that had Barrett not been banned from the house this week, he could have made a pitch for his bill at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday when the government called for a mildly unusual half-hour of business for private members' bills.

But Barrett was even cutoff from answering pensioner's questions as the auditorium was needed for the department of forestry again.

The pensioners filed out. They had been served tea and platitudes but were happy for the most part. These people of the gnarled hands that produced much of this province's wealth did not expect much more — at least their festive air betrayed no anger.

Pension Organization President Vincent Yates was only a little plaintive about not being able to present his brief to Premier Bennett.

It said respectful things like, "We come as one today to add our small tribute to the many events that are taking place . . . I hope, sir, that you will agree with me that our requests to your government have been modest."

Across the street in the legislature that afternoon the opposition was questioning Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's 232 trips in government aircraft in 1970.

As the pensioners pushed their way down museum halls one elderly lady asked another, "Do they know where they're going?"

Her companion answered, "I doubt it."

Politicians Come and Go Talking of Amalgamation

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Someone said recently that Premier Bennett's secret of political success is to keep the heat off his own policies by keeping the other sectors of the province at each other's throats.

What a nasty thing to say. It certainly works in and around Victoria, though. If there is one issue plaguing Greater Victorians that Bennett could solve in a jiffy, it is the question of amalgamation.

There are some sick theories about the value and dangers of amalgamation? Their sickness is only made more unhealthy by the fact that people talk about them, endlessly, seriously, prophetically, pathetically.

The scenario is grotesque. We are treated on one hand to a mayor who proudly campaigned as a parochialist, but increasingly adopts or attempts to adopt policies that are in essence a plea for amalgamation.

On the other hand we have a mayor who has two hats — one municipal, the other regional — and by skillfully switching this attire, promotes parochialism municipally while denigrating it regionally.

In another corner lies a self-preservation society — a publicly constituted private dormitory and lounge, dutifully served under the doctrine of noblesse oblige, and still not recovered from the English accent. And so on.

From behind all these hedgerows come the sick theories, the mortar attacks that lob meaninglessness across meaningless borders.

If they defend the status quo, they need no armor because the unkown is an easily conjured bogey. If attacking the status quo, the same applies.

The most eager utterances, the most symbolic arguments, coming from Canada's western-most, last-hope metropolis, are those that crow: "I'm all right, Jack."

Chuckle, chuckle was the reaction of Mayor Frances Elford and Mayor Art Young and Ald. Leslie Passmore, when Ald. Robert Baird humbled himself before the Intermunicipal Committee and offered the idea of a without-prejudice citizens committee to report on amalgamation.

By George, they weren't going to let the citizens get hold of anything like that (and they're not likely to storm the gates trying to grab it.) Now on your way Baird, Chuckle, chuckle, imagine the nerve.

Then there are preposterous arguments, heard also this week, that Saanich's exemplary management - employee relationship would be jeopardized by joining up with Victoria for the sake of more powerful labor bargaining.

Meanwhile, big daddy hacks away at the bus service, without more than a ripple of complaint.

How many mayors and aldermen have stormed into office on a platform of amalgamation and disappeared without ever having to answer for their foolishness?

How many brilliant thrusts of wit and rhetoric have sung from the home turf of some municipality that no one east of Sidney Spit ever heard of? How many political careers were forged in the epic furnaces of intermunicipal rivalry? And how proudly?

And how pitiable and useless are the perennial decrees from King Daniel of Municipal Land: Put Your House in Order.

The tragedy of it all is that citizens are forced to listen, newspapers are forced to convert it to history.

The greatest argument for amalgamation is that it would end the argument about amalgamation.

The Only Young We Have

By ART STOTT

James Michener, who holds a fistful of academic degrees, earned and honorary, and whose Pulitzer Prize-winning "Tales of the South Pacific" formed the theme for one of the best musicals produced in the United States, is 64 years old now, a towering success in his own field, a man disturbed by some of the recent currents in the United States, but still not a pessimist.

In a recent interview he has offered some of the sagest advice I've heard in relation to the division between the generations.

"The thing which people must realize, people who say, 'I don't want to turn this nation over to the young people'," the distinguished writer states, "is that there is no alternative. Before the end of this century the young people who frighten some of us will be running every institution. We'd better get to work with the ones we have, therefore. We will have no others."

If we have any sense of obligation to the future, it seems to me, we can't just opt out, turn our backs on the youngsters and take the attitude that they'll learn from their own mistakes. There should be no inclination to press them into a static mold in these flexible and fluid times.

But, from experience and knowledge, we should be able to point out to them certain values and principles which appear to be applicable to any worthwhile society, as they have been applicable in the past. The bright ones among the young will be able to recognize what is good and to discount what is bad. And in the latter category there are a substantial number of conventions which many elders have accepted without much diagnosis.

We're long past the time when "Poppa knows best" is the sole operative principle in informing the young. At the same time, we don't have to let a child press his hand firmly on a red-hot stove to learn that it will burn him. Some kids, of course, may ingist on the experiment, to their pain.

Mr. Michener, with a keen sense of responsibility to the future, concerns himself with the current dilemmas in the United States. His reading of history convinces him that all great societies have reached a peak and gone down. The same, he feels, will apply to the United States. But it need not happen as quickly as it did with Greece, Persia and Rome. American society, he thinks, is good for another 200 to 300 years, provided it works sanely to avoid complete collapse.

He is convinced that racial prejudice is America's number one problem, impinging on many fields. And he makes an impressive point to me on this issue.

Prejudice, he says, is recognized in some parts of the world as a private matter which cannot be legislated for or against.

But discrimination based on prejudice is something with which the courts can deal, and will deal, in the context of a person's right to earn a living. This in spite of the persistent determination of people of the same background to socialize together, dine together and seek out one another's company.

If you accept the Anita Loos' satirical theme that "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," there's no reason why gentlemen shouldn't exercise their preference in this respect. That shouldn't make brunettes second-class citizens.

It is a simple fact of humanity that we all have our prejudices. We become more civilized in the correct meaning of that word when we restrain those prejudices from injuring innocent people.

It seems to me that the so-called generation gap springs from the inability of some members of different age groups to accept that point of view. And perhaps the young rebels have a point in their favor if they err in this respect. So many of them visualize a world of possible perfection. It's one of the visions that has to be sustained, particularly among the young, or the chances of approaching more closely to unattainable perfection would wither.

So the experienced, often disillusioned elders, have to be careful, when trying to show the young that the ideal is inspired, but that practicalities of human nature leave it little more than an ideal. We can't destroy the goal and maintain the objective that attracts idealistic youth.

It's a delicate operation, but as Mr. Michener says, "We'd better get to work with the (young) ones we have. We will have no others."

Plays Selected For Honor Night

By CHERYL BORRIS

Three plays, representing elementary, junior and senior divisions of the Greater Victoria Drama Festival, have been chosen for an honor performance after a week of evening and afternoon sessions. A total of 28 plays were presented by 22 participating schools.

The top plays, selected by a committee of festival officials and adjudicators Christine McNab and Carl Hare for their quality, program suitability and balance, are Tom Sawyer's Morning (Prospect Lake Elementary School); Mushroom (Glenlyon Preparatory School for Boys), and Family Album by Noel Coward (Oak Bay Senior High School).

The plays were chosen to present a cross section of the offerings in the festival and not on a competitive basis.

The festival finished Friday night at S. J. Willis Junior High School, with presentations from the host school and Esquimalt and Claremont senior high schools.

CHARMING NIGHT

"After a fascinating week of variety," said adjudicator Hare, "we have finished up with three comments on society: the way we gang up on others in order to hide our own weaknesses, the way we play at fashionable beliefs and hang-ups, and the way we destroy ourselves politically. A charming night."

Once Upon a Playground, offered by S. J. Willis, presented an expressionistic view of children and their attitudes. The production caught the stylized aspect successfully and captured the reality and the unreality of the playground.

Hare noted, "This is not a play of subtleties, and it is not a particularly well-written play. The actors worked well together and brought it off very well. This was a bright production that caught the expressionistic viewpoint and yet remained entirely believable."

SECOND PLAY

The second play of the evening presented by Esquimalt Senior High was Crawling Arnold. Hare explained that this was a "wry satire on the American dream gone sour." The characters are stereotypes and therefore the actors must define roles that are precise and forcefully delineated.

The cast had problems reaching the whole area of the auditorium, adapting to the demands of space, sensing the audience, and with the role-playing necessary to each character.

Hare commented, "Arnold, played by Steve Basich, had some of the quirky naivete and some of the sly aggressiveness of The 35-year-old liberal, but was still trying to get into the part. He needed more variety in mood and speech.

"Barry (Chris Jiggens) as The All-American Father had no middle range to his voice. It was sometimes too loud and sometimes his projection was too small.

SOCIAL MASK

"Janet Peressini's Grace had all the glitter and sense of a social mask, but we lost her age. These are very difficult characters to play. They are 70-year-olds, but they are trying so very hard to be young. This is difficult to get across.

"Marg Lindsay as Miss Sympathy did not catch the professional mannerisms of The Social Worker. This is a difficult part also.

"All in all, this was a valiant attempt, but this cast was not really ready for the demands of characterization."

The final presentation of the evening was Ballista, offered by Claremont Senior High.

INTERPLAY

Hare said that the characters had some trouble with interplay and response, in some cases overacting and anticipating. Meal (Virginia Lace) was a "beautiful-looking queen"; Protos as king (Bert Ter Mors) had a "pleasant, solid personality, but was still groping for the authority of the character; Gaius (George Eade) had all the right political requirements of his character, and Flavius (John Porter) offered a manly and vigorous presentation of the Roman commander.

Tonight the honor performance will be at Oak Bay Junior High. The evening will begin at 8 o'clock.

THE WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies were clear over much of southwestern and interior B.C. overnight but rain occasionally mixed with wet snow was reported along the north coast as the remnants of Friday's deep low pressure centre moved up the Alaska panhandle. There were sunny periods over the interior and extreme southwest of the province today but a deep active fast-moving Pacific storm will give rain and gale force winds to the north coast later which will spread to the south coast this afternoon and give a mixture of rain and snow to the interior overnight. Showers will be general on Sunday in the unstable onshore flow behind the disturbance.

UVIC WORKSHOP ON DISORDERS

About 300 teachers, psychologists, psychiatrists and other specialists are attending the sixth neurophsychology workshop at the University of Victoria today and Sunday.

Dr. Frank Benson, association professor of neurology at Boston University School of Medicine, and Dr. Charles Strother, director of the Child Development and Mental Retardation Centre at the University of Washington in Seattle, are featured speakers on reading retardation and learning disorders.

The University of Victoria department of psychology and neuropsychological laboratory is presenting the program, which is sponsored by the provincial government.

Chairman of today's presentations, which deal with dyslexia, or reading disability, are William Gaddes and Frank Spellacy, Uvic psychology professors, and Dr. Charles Gregory, psychiatrist and executive director of the Pacific Centre for Human Development.

Taking part in discussions are Dr. Charles Simpson, local neurologist, Dr. John Crichton, professor in pediatrics at UBC's faculty of medicine, and Peggy Koopman, education professor at UBC.

Dr. Robert Peet, a Victoria neurologist, and Uvic psychology professor Alex Bavelas will be chairmen of programs Sunday which will include a clinical demonstration with dyslexic patients by Dr. Benson.

Taking part in discussions will be Strother and Uvic psychology professor Otfried Spreen.

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. If I sell grain to a grain company and request that payment be deferred until the next year, in which year do I report the sale as income on my tax form?

A. You report it in the year it was sold to the company. The fact that you request them to hold payment until a later year does not change the date of sale. However, if you placed the grain in storage, received storage tickets and did not surrender them until a later year, at which time you are issued a cash ticket, you would report the sale in the year the cash ticket was issued.

Q. I was ill last year and some of my medical expenses were paid by the provincial hospital insurance and some were paid by a private insurance plan to which I contribute. Am I allowed to claim any of these expenses on my income tax, or may I only claim the $100 standard deduction?

A. You would not be able to claim hospital expenses or medical expenses that were paid by a provincial hospital insurance plan. However any medical bills that were paid by your private insurance company may be claimed on your income tax return. You should note that in order to calculate whether or not it is to your advantage to claim these expenses you must deduct from the total of the allowed amounts 3 per cent of your net income, as recorded on your income tax form. You may then claim the balance as the allowable portion of your medical expenses, plus any charitable donations. In this instance you would need to enclose with your income tax return receipts both for your medical expenses and for the charitable donations you have made.

Q. I am a salesman operating out of my house. I have a room set up as an office. Can I claim any expenses for this "office" when figuring my income tax?

A. If the room is used solely for the purpose of earning your income you may be entitled to deduct a portion of the cost of maintaining your house, as a business expense. Unfortunately, more information would be required before you could be advised on how to calculate the amount of your deduction, but your District Taxation Office will be pleased to help you.

Q. If I claim the children as exemptions on my tax return, can my wife claim the medical expenses paid on their behalf, on her return?

A. Ordinarily, the answer is no. However, where the bills for the child's medical expenses were received prior to 1970, there are some circumstances when it would be possible to do this. Your District Taxation office would be glad to give you further information.

Q. My nephew, aged 17, came to live with me last year when his parents were killed in an accident. Although I have not been appointed as his legal guardian, and no papers have been signed, he is totally dependent on me. Can I claim him as a dependant on my income tax form?

A. Yes. The fact that you have not been appointed his legal guardian would not bar you from claiming your nephew as a dependant if he otherwise qualified.

Love-Hate Approach Scored by Expert

TORONTO (CP) — Desmond Morin, a partner in a Toronto accounting firm, said Friday Canada needs capital from the United States and other countries to overcome its unemployment problem.

Addressing a York University seminar on foreign investment in Canada, Mr. Morin described the present "love-hate approach to foreign investment in Canada" as disconcerting.

"I believe that we have vast and growing needs for capital from a number of sources, including the United States, if we hope to overcome the real problem in this country—unemployment.

"The thought that we should forgo millions of investment dollars simply because they originate in a foreign country while three-quarters of a million Canadians are out of work is ludicrous.

"It is in fact to suggest that a Canadian working at a job provided by foreign capital would be better off to remain unemployed."

NOT ALWAYS NECESSARY

Mr. Morin, co-editor of the recently published Acquisitions and Mergers in Canada, said while foreign capital is necessary to solve Canada's present problems, it need not always be.

He called for legislation that would "provide great incentive for Canadians to invest in common stocks of widely-held companies while not discriminating against the foreign investor" and support from Canadian banks to finance expansion and acquisitions for Canadians.

"Other government assistance programs might help by offering loans for acquisitions or giving the Canadian Development Fund the first right of refusal for the purchase of profitable, growing Canadian enterprises."

Mr. Morin also suggested that foreign ownership in "certain critical industry classification" could be restricted and that regulations be passed giving Canadians the right to buy foreign industries in Canada on a gradual basis.

"Once the foreign parent knows our rules, I'm sure there will be less chance of misunderstanding."

More goes into a Volkswagen than just hard work.

How?

First of all, that's no ordinary Volkswagen up there. It's a Super Beetle. With a trunk that carries twice as much as any beetle ever.

(That takes care of 1 suitcase, 2 overnight bags and an attaché case.)

And in case you'd forgotten, every Volkswagen comes with a rear seat that folds down to create a cavernous 14.1 cubic feet of luggage space.

(That takes care of the other 4 suitcases, 5 overnight bags, 4 travel bags, and 3 train cases.)

Alas, all these years we've been known mostly for our uncanny dependability. Not for our uncanny luggage story.

But, as you can see, more goes into a VW than just a fierce attention to detail.

A good deal all around, considering you only have to put $2,249.* into one in the first place.

Processing Vessels To Be Built by VMD

A new contract for nearly $500,000 worth of new processing vessels has been awarded to Victoria Machinery Depot by Stearns Roger, Denver refinery contractor.

The pair of amine contacters for delivery in the fall will be part of a plant being built by West Coast Transmission at Fort St. John. They will each weigh 250 tons, have four-inch walls of alloy steel and measure 10½ feet diamenter by 70 feet long.

Toronto Market Outperformed Wall St. During Week

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A drop in lending rates powered Canadian stock markets in a sharp drive upward this week.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a key indicator of market movement, advanced .82 to 179.12.

It was the market's third consecutive weekly advance.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index rose 1.61 to 178.14.

Markets made their sharpest advance on Tuesday when the Toronto Dominion Bank announced reductions in its mortgage-lending rates.

The bank's conventional mortgage rate for single-family dwellings and semi-detached homes was cut to 9¾ per cent from 9½ per cent.

CUT RATE EARLIER

The reductions put the bank's rates in line with those of the Royal and Nova Scotia banks, which announced cuts earlier in the month.

Canadian markets during the week outperformed the New York Stock Exchange.

The average stopped below 900 after a three-month rally that petered out in mid-February. Prices rose Thursday, bringing the average to within about half a point of the 900 level, but the New York market faltered Friday.

The Chase-Manhattan Bank of New York reduced its prime rate Thursday to 5¼ per cent from 5½ per cent. The move sparked reductions by other U.S. banks.

Prime rate is the interest charged on loans to a bank's favored customers.

The federal government announced that it was negotiating with president R. A. Brown of Home to purchase a majority interest in the company.

Mr. Brown controls Home through Cygnus Corp., of Calgary.

On index at Toronto, base metals were up 2.81 to 93.85 and golds 1.23 to 183.63. Western oils lost .99 to 206.53.

Volume was 13.64 million shares, up from 11.01 million last week.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 4.38 million shares, down from 6.23 million last week. Gains outnumbered losses 216 to 163 with 117 issues unchanged.

Midget Submarine Ordered by Soviet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Russia has placed a $2 million order in Canada for a midget submarine.

The contract is between International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd. of North Vancouver and Sudoimport, the Russian purchasing agency.

It was signed on behalf of the Soviet Institute of Oceanology and the craft, a self-propelled manned submersible of the Pisces class, will be built in North Vancouver and delivered on board a Russian vessel at Halifax in late January, 1972.

Massey-Ferguson

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. had a profit in the first quarter this year after registering a $19.7 million loss in fiscal 1970.

For the quarter ended Jan. 31, Massey had net income of $400,000 (two cents a share) vs. $1.7 million (10 cents) in the first quarter of 1970.

Sales from worldwide operations totalled $197.6 million, up 14 per cent from $172.8 million during the first three months of the previous fiscal year. Farm-machinery sales were up 30 per cent to $115.9 million compared with $89.1 million.

Lornex

The cost of bringing into production a large open-pit copper mine in British Columbia has risen to $133 million from $123.6 million, according to Lornex Mining Corp., Ltd.

R. D. Armstrong, president of the Toronto-based subsidiary of Rio Algom Mines Ltd., said main reasons for the cost increase were delays in construction and cost increases.

Rio Algom

Rio Algom Mines Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $15.4 million or $1.19 a share for 1970, compared with $15.36 million or $1.18 in 1969.

The company attributed the slight increase to expanded steel operations and a reduction in corporate taxes.

Revenue for 1970 was $185 million compared with $175.38 million in the previous year.

Total sales of steel were $139 million or $11.9 million higher than 1969. Steel operations earnings were $9.6 million compared with $7.6 million in 1969.

The company has received three new orders for uranium, from Sweden, West Germany and Canada.

YOUR TAXES

Assets Kept in Family

By I. H. ASPER

A few weeks ago, the Tax Appeal Board was treated to the hearing of a classic in western Canadian tax cases. The case itself settles no new legal principles but is interesting because of its own facts. As well, it teaches a lesson to all Canadian families who engage in estate planning in order to keep assets in the family for several generations.

The facts of the case are typical of thousands of similar situations. The locale was Saskatchewan; the taxpayer a 90 year old farmer who had homesteaded and settled a large farm since 1899, having acquired it from his father who had pioneered in the area.

As is normal on the prairies, at the age of 84 he decided to think of retiring. Age and failing health was making it difficult for him to operate the large farm. Still following prairie tradition, it worried him that the farm, family-owned for about 100 years, might fall into the hands of strangers.

PLANS DISCUSSED

He called in his son to discuss his plan. The taxpayer also consulted his professional advisers and after family discussions made the following proposal: he would sell the farm, at fair value, partly to his son and daughter-in-law, and partly to his son's son and his wife. In that way, all would be assured that the family farm would remain in the family.

There was only one difficulty with the taxpayer's plan. His son and grandson had no money with which to pay for the farm. Enter the professional advisers. In the orthodox tradition of family estate planning, the taxpayer promised to make gifts each year to the son and grandson, to the maximum extent allowable tax-free under the law. The buyers would use the gifts to pay off the farm.

It was agreed that if the taxpayer died before he had made enough tax-free gifts to the family to enable them to pay for the farm, he would leave them an amount by his will to enable them to discharge their liability to the estate.

In simple terms, he wanted to give the farm to his son and grandson without incurring gift tax or estate tax, primarily because farms are not liquid assets and there is rarely any cash in the family to pay these taxes when land is transferred to the next generation. It is partly in recognition of this difficulty that Saskatchewan and Alberta have abolished estate taxation.

AT FAIR VALUE

In the case at hand, the taxpayer knew he would have to sell the farm to the family at its fair market value. The law provides that where one sells something to a member of his family for less than it's really worth, he is considered to have made a gift (which is taxable) of the difference between the actual price and the real value.

The taxpayer, having farmed in the district for several decades, knowing the character of the land and being familiar with the land prices in the district, did not get an independent appraiser to tell him the fair value of the farm. He evaluated it at $54,000 and entered into sale agreements with his son and grandson.

A few years later, the tax department reviewed the transaction and said the farm had really been worth $115,000 and therefore the head of the family had made a taxable gift of over $60,000 to his son and grandson. They charged him the gift tax on the $50,000.

KNEW BETTER

The taxpayer took the position that he knew better than anyone from Ottawa what Saskatchewan farm land was worth, and off he went to court. W. O. Davis, who heard the appeal, decided he was right, despite the fact that the revenue officials presented evidence, from a member of the Appraisal Institute, to support its view that the land was worth $115,000 and not $54,000.

That the tenacious taxpayer won his case is of passing interest. That the appeal board accepted the taxpayer's valuation of his own farm over that of a qualified appraiser is unusual, but justified in these circumstances. It will also be of some comfort to family estate planners and their advisers that the courts still do not frown upon legitimate estate planning and tax minimization plans.

But what should be learned by all taxpayers, inclined toward family asset preservation through estate planning, is that where family assets are sold to relatives, there is no substitute for having an independent appraisal made, at the time to sale, to determine the market value. It may save a good deal of time and costly argument.

The tax dangers are far too great to assume that all inter-family transactions will have the good fortune to be given the benefit of the doubt as happened in this case.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

Molson

Molson Industries Ltd. has purchased Midwest Storage and Distributing Co. Ltd. of Winnipeg.

The company paid cash for all the outstanding shares at undisclosed price.

Midwest operates storage and distribution facilities in Moncton, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. The company also distributes pharmaceutical supplies through a subsidiary, Midwest Pharmaceuticals.

WESTMILLS CARPET APPOINTMENT

Company President, Harry Higson, announces the appointment of Mr. Barry Bell as Sales Representative, Westmills Carpets Ltd., for Vancouver Island. Mr. Bell brings many years experience in the retail carpet industry to his new position and was until recently manager of one of the larger floor coverings stores.

VANCOUVER LEADS NEW CARGO RECORDS

Seven of the 10 ports administered by the National Harbors Board set cargo tonnage records in 1970 with Vancouver topping the list.

Vancouver port handled 27,158,913 tons compared to 23,080,469 in 1969; Montreal handled 25,047,299 compared to 1969's 20,538,174; Halifax, 11,577,000 (10,563,997); Quebec City, 8,859,884 (7,439,871); Saint John, 6,359,144 (6,282,729); Trois-Rivieres, 5,364,914 (3,733,060) and Churchill, 720,044 (804,111).

The 10 ports handles a total of 86,779,333 weight tons of 2,000 pounds. The previous record was set in 1966, being 74.1 million tons.

There was a drop in the number of ships calling at the ports. In 1969 there were 35,144 compared to 1970's 32,587.

KENT

Outspoken Artist Kent Dies at 88

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) —Rockwell Kent, as often condemned for his politics as admired for his art, died today in this northern New York City. He was 88.

The outspoken artist had been in failing health for some time. He was brought to Champlain Valley Medical Centre here March 2, but hospital officials did not disclose the nature of his ailment.

Kent was something of a modern-day Renaissance man, with accomplishments in lithography, farming, poetry, architecture, exploring and the breeding of Great Danes, as well as his painting.

His paintings, many of them portraying rugged landscapes, were included in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Chicago Art Institute and galleries in Washington, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Pregnancy Upheld

Legislature Gone to Dogs, Says Barrett

Opposition leader Dave Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam) broke the five-day silence imposed by his banishment from the legislature last week with the comment Friday that the house had gone to the dogs in his absence.

He made the tongue-in-cheek observation after rising to speak during second reading of a bill to amend the Animals Act.

The amendment would authorize a person to kill a dog in the act of "attacking or savagely pursuing" a person, or where a dog was in the act of "pursuing, worrying, wounding, or destroying a domestic animal."

"I wish to break my five-day silence in this house, Barrett said. "After my absence I find the place going to the dogs."

He said his party would hold a free vote on the bill.

Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin) was another opposition member who said the assembly was "going to the dogs" as he rose to speak in support.

He said there was a problem in his constituency and in other rural areas with dogs running in packs, and with vicious dogs attacking both adults and school children.

"We haven't been able to solve this problem. I'm very glad this bill has come in."

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said the bill would be valuable in unorganized areas.

Gordon Dowding, (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds), said he was concerned as to the effects of the bill in organized areas.

He mentioned a dog which was a family pet that was tried in court because it had injured one of two children who were tormenting the animal and trying to push it into a ditch of water.

After a blow on the head, Dowding said, "the dog reacted as any human being would react."

"I'm asking the minister: How can a dog get a decent trial under this bill?"

Leo Nimsick, (NDP—Kootenay) voiced concern that the bill would permit the public to "take the law into their own hands."

"Here you could have abuse," he said. "Valuable dogs could be killed."

Shelford pointed out that farmers have always had the right to shoot dogs which were "molesting" their animals.

The bill was given second reading.

It would also permit a peace officer to kill a dog running in a pack, and to apply to a provincial court judge for an order authorizing him to kill a dog if he thought the dog might injure a person.

ADVICE TO RETIREDS

The purchase and ownership of a single family detached home is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. With the ever-increasing shortage and consequent high cost of land and taxes, more and more people are realizing the advantages of living in multi-unit complexes of one kind or another. Metropolitan Toronto now houses more than half its population in apartments. It is predicted that in another few years three out of every four residents will live in this type of environment. The same trend is evident in all major cities: Vancouver, Montreal, Edmonton, and Winnipeg.

The average Canadian still aspires to home ownership as opposed to a lifetime of tenancy.

Essentially, conveyance of title under condominium legislation transfers to the mortgagor clear and full ownership (fee simple) of a specific unit within a building and a shared interest and responsibility in the common elements, the land, structural columns, girders, halls, elevators, heating services, gardens, parking area, etc.; all the advantages of apartment living, plus the security and gratification of 'owning your own home'. No need to worry about leases or inflating rents, an equity build-up will be enjoyed in the same way as a single family home.

Indian Legend Boost for Women's Lib

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Her name was Mary. She was a formidable women — a champion of women's rights.

I ran across her 25 years ago in a London pub addressing a small audience, mostly men, on the rights of women.

"Do you know why women have never enjoyed equal rights with men?" she asked.

Our eyes met, and I felt I was slowly being shrivelled into an acorn.

"Well, it was all due to the chap who wrote in the book of Genesis that God created man first and woman later for his convenience," she said.

"Ever since then," she added, eyeing me coldly, "this belief has been impregnated into the male's subconscious and it explains his over-inflated ego."

I wasn't going to argue the point with Mary. After all

NOTICIAS DE NUTKA, by Jose Mariano Mozino. Translated and edited by Iris Higbie Wilson. McClelland and Stewart. $8.50.

I had my skin to protect and she did look like the Statue of Liberty.

This may have nothing to do with this book, but the incident came to mind after reading the amusing legend on the origin of the human race as related by Nootkan Indians to Spanish botanist Jose Mariano Mazino.

Mary would have enjoyed hearing that the Vancouver Island tribe believed the opposite — Eve was created first and the male species was an after-thought—the result of a woman's sneeze.

The legend is delightful. It even captured the fancy of the famous German naturalist Friedrich Humboldt. But before relating it, something about the botanist and his works.

Mozino was born in Mexico in 1757 and at an early age distinguished himself in his studies, receiving a degree in scholastic theology and ethics when he was just 20 years old.

Later he took a course in mathematics, then enrolled in medicine, received his degree in 1787.

But instead of following a medical career, he studied botany, a subject in which he was to become famous.

Then in 1792 he accompanied Spanish navigator Juan Francisco de la Bodgegay Quadra to Nookta where the latter met Captain George Vancouver.

During his four-month stay on the island, the botanist gathered a wealth of information on the customs of the Nootka Indians at the time of their initial contact with European civilization. He describes their houses, drink, dress, food, religion and law and also gives an account of the English and Spanish claims to Nootka.

Mozino's works were published in Spanish, but the edition was limited and poorly distributed and for this reason he remained neglected. Now for the first time his account has been translated into English by Iris Wilson of the University of San Diego.

The book is illustrated with reproductions of drawings by Atanasio Echeverria, the artist who accompanied the expedition, and facsimile reproductions of manuscript pages.

If you read this book, I think you will agree that Mozino deserves to be more widely known and remembered by Canadians. He is part of British Columbia's heritage. There is yet no public or university building, street, or square named after him.

We learn a lot about the Indians from Mozino as well as their impressions of the western intruders. They didn't like the behavior of Europeans.

As for European music, Maquinna, who was chief then, said he didn't like the sounds of the instruments because they seemed similar to the sounds of birds "which please the ear but do not require understanding."

Mozino's impressions of the powers of the Indian chiefs and their relations with their people I think should be accepted with reservations.

That there was a hereditary class is beyond dispute, but it is doubtful if the Nootkans saw their chiefs in the same light as Mozino and some present-day anthropologists. Members of a tribal band were more or less all related by blood-ties and it must have had an impact on their outlook and the relationships with one another.

Perhaps we shall never know for sure how much authority Nootkan chiefs enjoyed. It would be presumptious for a scientist to claim an understanding of the mental condition of a people living in a totally different environment from his own without first living among them for many years.

And even then his observations would be affected by his character — the temptation to be too academic at the expense of intuition — the fear of being laughed at by his fellow workers.

To return to the Indian legend of Eve, the story goes that God created a woman and left her perfectly alone in the forests of Yuquatl in which lived deer without antlers, dogs without tails and ducks without wings.

Naturally, any woman finding herself so isolated would cry, and Eve did not lose time in doing so. She wept day and night until Qua-utz (the deity), sympathizing with her tears, came to see her in a copper canoe manned by handsome young men.

"Astonished by this spectacle, the girl remained stunned at the foot of a tree, until one of the paddlers advised her that it was the All-Powerful who had the goodness to visit the beach and supply her with the company she longed for."

At these words, the melancholy girl redoubled her weeping; her nose began to run, and she sneezed its discharge onto the nearby sand. Qua-utz then ordered her to pick up what she had sneezed out, and to her astonishment she found palpitating the tiny body of a man which had just been formed.

She gathered it in a shell appropriate to its size, and was instructed by the deity to continue keeping it in larger shells as it grew in size.

After this the Creator got into his boat again, after having allowed even the animals to share his liberality, because at the same moment the deer saw antlers grow over his forehead, the dog began to wag a tail — with which he found himself provided — from one side to the other, and the birds were able to lift themselves by the wind and try out for the first time the gift of wings which they had just received.

Oh! If Mary had lived long enough to read this story . . .

A TRANSLATION YOU CAN TRUST

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

Since the joy of reading a foreign author in the original is strictly for polyglots and students, it is even more of a joy to discover a translation one can trust.

Jorge Luis Borges, who counts English as one of his better "second" languages,

THE ALEPH AND OTHER STORIES, 1933-1969, by Jorge Luis Borges, edited and translated by Norman Thomas di Giovanni in collaboration with the author. Clarke, Irwin. $9.95.

collaborated with the translator Norman Thomas de Giovanni to rewrite these stories using the English equivalent of Spanish idiom, rather than the dictionary equivalent.

The sentences in The Aleph flow with an English cadence. The metaphors are easily accessible, though not trite. The stories are, in short, written as they would be if Borges were an Englisman.

This is, perhaps, a minor point. Certainly many English readers read and enjoyed Borges in the earlier translations.

But the accumulation of minor inaccuracies can change the whole atmosphere of a story.

This is most evident in the Dead Man. An earlier translation leaned heavily on untranslated Spanish words (compadrito, peon) as well as somewhat uncommon English terms such as equestrian (translated by Borges and de Giovanni as horse) and resume (which became outline.) And this was only in the first paragraph.

This needlessly confuses the introduction of the main character, and, in a way, changes the reader's view of him.

It is easier to feel compassion for "a sorry hoodlum with little less to his credit than a passion for recklessness," than "a wistful compadrito, with no other virtue than an infatuation with courage."

In addition to offering a good authoritative translation of 20 Borges short stories, this edition includes an autobiographical essay, written directly into English.

This essay not only gives an outline of the author's life, but also sheds light on the sources of his wry humor.

His parents are never absent from his life. Even now he depends on his mother more than his wife.

Yet, deeply rooted as he is in his ancestry and his country, Argentina, Borges draws literary nourishment from all over the globe.

Scholar, Soldier, Gadfly —That's Frank Underhill

By JAMES McCOOK

The Liberals' return to power in Ottawa was assisted by a party meeting in Kingston called by Opposition Leader Pearson in 1960.

The temptation was to be content with the usual profound speeches on what policy should be, denounce Prime Minister Diefenbaker and his Conservative government, and wait for better days. The conference was saved from a fate equivalent to political death by a few dissatisfied critics who questioned, doubted and complained.

In a familiar role of leader of critics on that occasion was Frank H. Underhill, born of a family of shoemakers in Stouffville, Ont., in 1889, a scholar, soldier, and gadfly of the complacent.

When Liberal panjandrums and their Kingston guests made pompous speeches about what they'd do when they were back in power, Underhill shot them down as easily as Billy Bishop shot down German captive balloons.

When reports went out from Kingston that Liberals were actually debating policies, not accepting what was offered them on platters of Mackenzie King silver, the Liberal Party suddenly seemed relevant to the times.

Underhill would not have been at the Kingston meeting of Liberals if his party of first choice had lived up to his expectations. He had written the first draft of the Regina Manifesto which in 1933 proclaimed the goals of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, later the New Democratic Party.

Prof. Penlington, of Michigan State University, in his admirable introduction to this book, says the divisions between Underhill and the Establishment became narrower in the 1940s and 1950s. It might also be said that the CCF and NDP were without the fire and causes of their earlier days.

Perhaps they mellowed more than Prof. Underhill, who may have found the Liberals in defeat more responsive to his prodding than Socialists growing old.

If this were a history of Underhill rather than a tribute to him, the reader would expect more to be told of his influence on the CCF, his enthusiasm for the cause of western wheat-farmers and their organizations and his contributions to the Canadian Forum magazine to which he gave spirited and witty opinions. He lamented the absence of any radical tradition in Canadian society and appears to lament it to this day.

Those interested in radical opinions in Canada 30 years ago and more will find the bibliography of Underhill writings published in "On Canada" of value.

Among the tribute articles is that by Prof. F. W. Cogswell of the University of New Brunswick on "The Poetry of Modern Quebec" describing with concern the "overwhelming sense of loneliness and of the futility of human action" which he finds is a distinctive feature of that poetry today.

Escott Reid, a prominent figure in Canadian diplomatic and university circles, writes of the work methods of External Affairs Minister St. Laurent, later Prime Minister, and his ready acceptance of responsibility which endeared him to the civil service.

Prof. Neil Compton of Sir George Williams University, discussing the defence of Canadian culture, quotes with approval the Underhill argument that the more fully Canada remains open to American culture the more intensely Canadians are likely to realize their own individuality. After seeing some American TV programs, Underhill's confidence appears justified.

Silly Mr. Pepys Chattered His Way to Immortality

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON — The eminent civil servant, out walking with his wife on a fine May morning, sees a lady's lacy underwear hanging out to dry in a garden — and his thoughts quickly stray from the straight and narrow.

Back home, he confides to his diary that the sight "did me good to look upon them."

The civil servant, as might be guessed, is Samuel Pepys, whose highly personal chronicles of daily and nightly doings in the bawdy reign of King Charles II pioneered a whole new genre of English letters.

"Poor, silly, conceited Mr. Secretary Pepys ... chattered his way into the circle of the immortals," wrote Oscar Wilde of the man who blazed a trail for generations of diarists.

The chatter has proved more durable than many pompous works of literature. Three centuries after writing his final "and so to bed" — the phrase with which Pepys signed off so many eventful days — the immortal scribbler is enjoying a full-scale revival in London this winter.

The anniversary has been marked by a Pepys-era exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery, including a reconstruction of the diarist's home, and by publication of the first unexpurgated edition of the famous journal. The last one came out in the 1890s, when the prudish Victorians whitewashed earthy words and suppressed erotic passages.

The new edition, fruit of 20 years' work by British and American professors, is published by George Bell of London and when completed in a few years' time will run to 11 volumes — one for each year covered by the diary — a volume of comment on the culture of the Restoration period and an index.

The first three volumes span the years 1660 to 1662 and have already been hailed by the authoritative Times Literary Supplement as "among the outstanding contributions to literary scholarship in the 20th century."

"We have now got as near as we are ever likely to get to the Diary as it might have been written by Pepys himself if he had ever transcribed his shorthand," says the Literary Supplement.

Pepys began writing his journal at the age of 26 when he was appointed Clerk of the Acts to the navy board and ended it May 31, 1669, when his failing eyesight made it difficult to decipher the angular shorthand he used to keep his entries secret.

An ambitious, clever man, he eventually rose to be secretary of the admiralty under King James I and history has rated him one of England's greatest administrators.

But in the years of the diary, Pepys was a young man on the make, in every sense. The daily entries open a fascinating window on the life of 17th-century London, a city of 500,000 inhabitants where everything of importance happened in the few square miles linking Whitewall, Fleet Street and the Tower.

Pepys records not only his recurring lusts for servant girls and carpenters' wives, but also his irritation at his coach being caught in a 90-minute traffic jam between Whitehall and Lincoln's Inn Fields, a distance of barely a couple of miles. He spends a lot of time guzzling wine in Fleet Street taverns, usually ending up "fuddled" or "foxed" with a mighty hangover, although he samples tea for the first time — "a China drink."

The diary reflects plenty of the seamy side of 17th-century life. Pepys watches Major-General Harrison, a plotter against the King's life, being hanged, drawn and quartered at Charing Cross — "he looking as cheerfully as any man could do in that condition."

In the coming volumes, great events cast their shadow over Samuel's daily round. He lived through the plague of 1665 and the Great Fire of London the following year, which ravaged the old wooden city as far west as Temple Bar.

But most reviewers consider that the special value of Pepys' diary lies in its ineffable mixture of vivid detail and gossip, the grab-bag of apparently trivial items which bring the age to life.

'Methinks He Was a Vain Rascal'

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON — Up betimes and fell to reading how there was newly on the bookstalls the first complete edition ever of the Diaries of S. Pepys and an exhibition opening this day at the National Portrait Gallery of the life and times of that "very worthy, industrious and curious person," as Sir J. Evelyn writ of him.

So by coach to the gallery and overlooked some very pretty pictures, some the gallery's own and some lent by lords and ladies and the Queen herself, and also some rooms set up like those wherein he lived and kept his diaries for nine years on end.

I was might pleased but perceived he was vain rascal, there being no less than eight portraits he commissioned of himself, very handsome but with an over full mouth and jowls.

Methought the pictures of Moll Davis and Nell Gwyn, the actresses he admired so exceedingly, were even more excellent. But Lord! The latter was painted bare from head to waist and the sight of it would make a man mad. She was a beautiful well-carriaged lass.

Pepys writ of Nelly, a bold merry slut, that my Lord Brockhurst snatched her from the stage to make of her his mistress, and told how "Nelly and Beck Marshall, falling out the other day, the latter called the other my Lord Brockhurst's whore. Nell answered that, 'I was but one man's whore though I was brought up in a bawdy house to fill strong waters to the guest; and you are a whore to three or four though a Presbyter's daughter!' — which was very pretty."

Thence to the National Book League in Albemarle Street to see the new printing of the diaries and thought them very handsome, but the first three volumes, all that are off the press, being sold at ten guineas. Whereat I was vexed cruelly, having no mind to spend that great amount of money, and so made shift to do without.

Yet they are very fine, being fully annotated and the first such. I now perceive that lack of proper notes is one thing that hitherto hath put me so long off the hooks with them, in that no man can fight his way without a cunning guide through such a trying welter of names and references as they contain.

There fell into discourse with Mr. Richard Barber, of the printers, B. Bell and Sons, in Portugal Street, who did tell me that it was a task of 20 years for the editors, Mr. Robert Latham of Cambridge and Mr. William Matthews, from the colonies — methinks the University of California — to put all the earlier false readings from Pepys' shorthand aright and set down new material, close on to one-tenth of the whole, that hath never been included.

Some of the new passages, Mr. Barber discovered to me, had been thought by the preceding Victorian editors so naughty as not to be fit for decent eyes and hence were omitted entirely or scarce hinted at.

But scruples being lately so much changed, we may now read:

"This night I had a strange dream of depissing myself, which I really did; and having kicked the clothes off, I got cold and found myself all much-wet and had a great deal of pain in making water, which made me very melancholy."

And the new edition do show, which I find very strange, that Pepys felt obliged to record what a lewd rogue he was, though contrite about it afterwards. He writ on Sept. 1st:

"Thence to my Lord's (Sandwich) where nobody at home but a woman that let me in, and Sarah above; whither I went up to her and played and talked to her and, God forgive me, did feel her; which I am much ashamed of, but I did no more, though I had so much a mind to it that I spent in my breeches."

Had a glass of sack, a dish of herrings, anchovies and neat's (cow's) tongue, Pepys being fonder of them than any man that ever I heard of. And so to the office.

TV MOVIES

Tonight

8:30: Channel 5: The Pleasure of His Company (1961 comedy) Fred Astaire, Debbie Reynolds. Good cast takes advantage of some witty lines to give this comedy a fair amount of fun.

Channel 6: Casino Royale (British; 1967 adventure) David Niven, Peter Sellers. Five directors, including John Huston, worked on this spy film.

9:00: Channel 2: The Young Savages (1961 drama) Burt Lancaster, Dina Merrill. Hunter's novel "A Matter of Conviction" makes for a hard-hitting crime drama.

Channel 5: The Quiller Memorandum (1966 drama) George Segal, Alec Guiness. Cold war thriller with a Harold Pinter screenplay and top international cast.

Channel 12: Nevada Smith (1966 western) Steve McQueen, Pat Hingle. Cowpoke turns gunslinger to avenge the death of his parents.

9:30: Channel 4: Invitation to a Gunfighter (1964 western) Yul Brynner, Janice Rule. There's more Freud than Zane Grey in this story of renegades and revenge.

11:15: Channel 5: The Big Gamble (British; 1961 adventure) Stephen Boyd, Juliette Greco. An Irishman, his bride and a meek cousin seek their fortune on the Ivory Coast.

Channel 8: Who's Minding the Mint? (1967 comedy), Jim Hutton, Dorothy Provine. The kids will enjoy this farce and the grownups too if you're in the mood for this kind of good clean fun.

11:30: Channel 6: The Quiller Memorandum (See 9 p.m. Channel 8 for details.)

11:30 Channel 12: Home from the Hill (1960 drama) Robert Mitchum, George Hamilton. Fine characterization builds in interest.

Sunday

8:30: Channel 11: Merrill's Marauders (1962 drama) Jeff Chandler, Ty Hardin. Splendid war film-story of the famous outfit of war-hardened veterans who battled the enemy in Burma under excruciating conditions calling for the limit of human endurance.

7:00: Channels 7 and 12: Born Free (1966 adventure) Bill Travers, Virginia McKenna. A treat for the whole family.

9:00: Channel 4: The Quiller Memorandum (1966 drama) George Segal, Alex Guinness. In Berlin, the murder of one of their men prompts British Intelligence to put an American agent named Quiller on the scene. Directed on location.

Channel 12: The World of Suzie Wong (1961 drama) William Holden, Nancy Kwan. Drama involving an American artist and a girl of the streets of Hong Kong.

11:15: Channel 7: The Sun Also Rises (1957 drama) Tyrone Power, Ava Gardner. An excellent film, some good on-location photography and a colorful performance by the late Errol Flynn. Gardner in one of her best roles.

11:30: Channel 6: Who's Minding the Mint (See Saturday 11:15 p.m., Channel 8.)

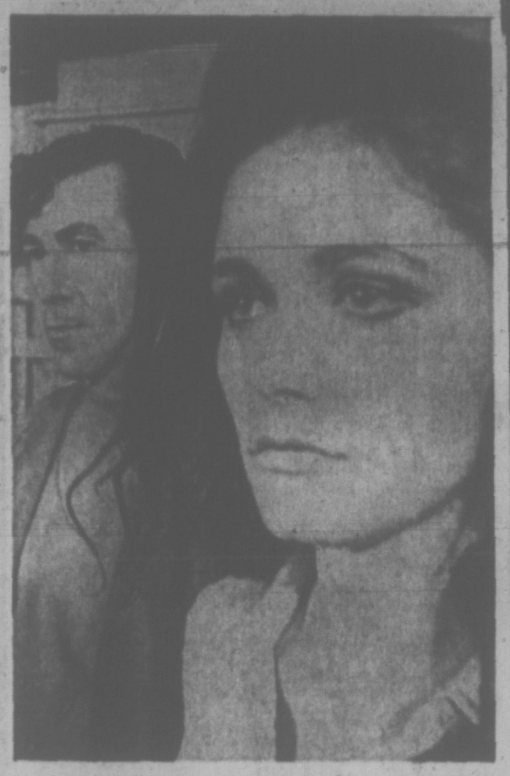
11:45: Channel 4: These Wilder Years (1956 drama) James Cagney, Barbara Stanwyck. Steel magnate searches for his illegitimate son of 20, runs into unexpected opposition.



X-KALAY DRAMA, final episode in CBC-TV's The Manipulators series, Sunday at 9 p.m., features Margot Kidder and Al Koslik and their involvement with the rehabilitation of ex-prisoners.

WEEKEND SPORTS

TONIGHT

5:00, Channels 2, 6: Hockey. Boston Bruins and the Canucks battle at Vancouver.

5:30, Channel 5: Golf. Third-round action in the Florida Citrus Invitational.

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

HOCKEY, 5 p.m., Channels 2 6. The powerful Boston Bruins take on the Canucks in Vancouver.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC, 7 p.m., Channel 8. Dr. Louis B. Leakey, a British anthropologist, and his wife spent years digging in Africa. In July, 1959, May Leakey unearthed the skull of a prehistoric man, dated one and three-quarter million years old.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE, 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. Tonight's guest star is 73-year-old George Sanders, who has no plans, he says, to retire. He is sophisticatedly sinister as one of the world's largest dealers in smuggled arms. The IMF team is assigned to break up a million-dollar sale of guns to Middle East guerrillas and put Sanders out of business permanently.

PEARL BAILEY, 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. It's Moms Mabley night at Pearlie Mae's and Moms is up to form, particularly when she solos on "Don't Sit on the Bed." Pearl's other guests are commedienne Joan Rivers and singer Wayne Newton. Newton sings Janis Joplin's "Me and Bobby McGee" and Joan does a monologue and sings "Joy of Laughter."

MY THREE SONS, 8:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12. The memory of "Terrible" Tom Kubinsky, a tough-talking Navy buddy, is one of Uncle Charlie's most cherished. Tonight Terrible Tom comes for a visit and, to Charlie's disgust, doesn't seem so terrrible anymore.

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Pleasure of His Company" (1961) starring Fred Astaire, Debbie Reynolds, Lilli Palmer, Tab Hunter, Gary Merrill and Charlie Ruggles. Astaire is his most debonair as a globetrotting playboy. He shows up in San Francisco for the wedding of Debbie Reynolds and upsets mom's plans for daughter's marriage to wealthy young Tab Hunter.

ARNIE, 9 p.m., Channel 7. (Rerun). The reruns are starting early but if you missed Arnie's climb from loading dock foreman to executive status, here's last September's episode. Arnie has a tough time of it for a while because of a dispute with executive Neil Oglevie, but instead of being fired, the boss promotes him.

MARY TYLER MOORE, 8 p.m., Channel 8; 9:30 p.m. Channel 7. It's second time around for this show too. In a repeat of the series opener, Mary lands a job on a local television news staff, finds an apartment and ends her first day in town moonlighting as a babysitter.

MANNIX, 10 p.m., Channel 7. Mannix's friends are getting knocked off again and he goes after the killer. But the prime suspect, he finds, may not be responsible. Carol Bagdasarian, the daughter of the man who created "Alvin and the Chipmunks," plays Nancy, the secretary.

Sunday

TRAVEL SPECIAL, 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6. So you think you know Canada! Program host Fred Davis asks 20 questions about Canada's historical sites, national parks, lake and mountain resports, and annual festivals to Pierre Berton, travel experts and a national TV audience. Viewers are urged to keep their own scores.

HOCKEY, 12 noon, Channels 7, 12. (Live). The Chicago Black Hawks have the Western Division all but wrapped up, but the trailing St. Louis Blues are dangerous. Dan Kelly handles the play-by-play and Jim Gordon the commentary from Chicago Stadium.

MEET THE PRESS, 3:30 p.m., Channel 5. Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally is on the firing line today, and shooting questions at him will be Edwin Dale, Jr., of the New York Times, Peter Lisagor of the Chicago Daily News, Irving R. Levine of NBC News and Lawrence Spivak, the program's producer.

ANIMAL WORLD, 5:30 p.m., Channel 12. (Rerun) In a repeat of a 1969 program, Bill Burrud takes us to the Amazon jungle, a place so remote and forbidding it is called the world's last frontier. You will see the giant anaconda, a boa constrictor, an enormous anteater, curious fresh water dolphin and thousands of monkeys on their own island.

MOVIE, 2:30 p.m., Channels 6, 8; 7 p.m., Channels 7, 12. "Born Free" (1966), starring Bill Travers and Virginia McKenna as George and Joy Adamson, and a houseful of lions. The movie, based on Mr. Adamson's international best-seller, tells the story of a lioness raised among humans who has to be trained to survive in her natural environment. A sensitive film about love and patience.

WILD KINGDOM, 7 p.m., Channel 5. Host Marlin Perkins and Stan Brock take us today to northern Minnesota on the trail of the moose. In the Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge, scientists for the University of Minnesota ad the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service are studying the animal's habits.

FBI, 8 p.m., Channel 4. Tonight's subject: college basketball. The case: bribery and extortion. In "The Natural," the FBI goes after a powerful New York criminal sydicate using bribes and threats to fix games. Guests are Peter Mark Richmond, Anthony Costello and Susan O'Connel.

SUNDAY NIGHT MOVIE, 9 p.m., Channel 4. "The Quiller Memorandum" (1967), starring George Segal, Alex Guiness, Max Von Sydow, Senta Berger and George Sanders. The film dealing with the rise of neo-Nazism in modern Germany, lacks the punch of the book. Despite the efforst of a fine cast, it is uneven and confusing. Spy buffs, however, suffer through.

BURT BACHARACH, 9 p.m., Channel 7, stars the pianist-composer and guests Barbra Streisand, Tom Jones and dancer Rudolf Nureyev. This is the first of two back-to-back specials on CBS tonight. Jones and Streisand handle most of the chores on Bacharach's songs, and in an interesting tangent, Nureyev does a ballet interpretation of Bacharach's music for the movie "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

BONANZA, 9 p.m., Channel 5. Michael Landon play both sides of the camera for tonight's episode in which he is blinded in an explosion. He directed and helped write the script. Jo Van Fleet is guest star.

MASTERPIECE THEATER, 9 p.m., Channel 9. "The First Churchills: A Famous Victory." In tonight's episode, John Churchill, now Duke of Marlborough, leads his troops into Germany and defeats the French at the Battle of Blenheim.

DORIS MARY, 10 p.m., Channel 7. This is CBS's second of the evening. It's a low-key hour with Mr. Low Key himself, Perry Como, as guest. Doris goes through a complete wardrobe of clothes and shows, on film clips, why she's cried more than any other actress in Hollywood. Incidentally, there is nothing artificial in the garden, a replica of Doris's own, planted lovingly on a television sound stage.

BOLD ONES, 10 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun) George Stanford Brown, Charles Lampkin and Gloria Calomee guest star in "Panther in a Cage." This is the legal factions' week and Burl Ives, Joseph Campanella and James Farentino are defending a Black Panther charged with the murder of a plainclothesman.

Hogan's Heroes Quit Stalag 13 For Las Vegas

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Hogan's Heroes" finally bust out of Stalag 13 only to find themselves in the middle of a trackless waste — Las Vegas.

Star Bob Crane, along with Werner Klemperer (Col. Klink) and Robert Clay (the French POW), will open in a Las Vegas hotel June 1 with an act built around the television series.

In a sense the nightclub number is an experiment.

Other television stars make fortunes by hitting the road. The casts of "Bonanza," "Gunsmoke," "The Beverly Hillbillies" — as singles or groups — play rodeos, fairs and clubs with great success.

Crane, who has written and will produce the club show, is convinced his act will be successful.

"In addition to our big 'Hogan's Heroes' sketch we'll have a comic magician and a chorus line," he said. "Most of the show, though, will be based on the nostalgia of post-World War II.

"We'll start out with the end of the war and Hogan going back to the big band business with Colonel Klink as his manager. As part of the show I play the drums, while Werner and Bob sing."

With a finale like that the trio may be back in Stalag 13 quickly.

Actually, Crane would have preferred to use the entire cast of the CBS series, including John Banner, the rotund Sgt. Schultz.

"Truth of the matter is we can't afford it," Crane explained. "The actors on the show draw high salaries. And, to be honest, I'd like to go on by myself. But I'm known as Hogan and that's the place to start.

"As an entertainer a lot of people in this business feel you have to have a Vegas feather in your cap."

As Crane spoke his series was in 40th place in the ratings, about as promising a spot as ground zero at Alamagordo. After six years on the air the CBS show has been ruthlessly uncoupled.

Unmoved, Crane will grab the first good series to come along.

"I don't believe in waiting around between series," he said. "I've seen too many guys say it's a good thing to hold off for movies or look around for that one series in a million.

"Sometimes you never heard of them again. You can't rely on movie work year in and year out unless you're John Wayne.

"I'm the kind of guy who climbs the walls if I'm not working regularly. That's why I like a television series. My series was reduced from 39 weeks to 24. I don't like that."

If Bob isn't busy on a new show he'll tour for weeks on end in "Beginners Luck" or another theatrical production.

"I still hope 'Hogan's Heroes' is renewed," he concluded.

CLIFF ROBERTSON

Actor Develops Film—Then Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cliff Robertson became the first actor in recent memory to be approached by a major studio to develop a motion picture in which he would star.

A Universal vice-president asked him almost 18 months ago to pick a screen play, help rewrite it and work on the production schedule.

The reason is relatively simple. Robertson devoted seven years to developing, writing and selling "Charlie," the film that won him an Academy Award in 1968.

Robertson's painstaking research and dedication to the total picture — not just his role — has spawned a rare actor indeed.

Perhaps the last such was Charlie Chaplin, but he owned his own studio. Cornell Wilde has done similar things.

The picture Robertson decided on was "The Great Northfield, Minnesota Raid," a factual account of the Cole Younger gang's unsuccessful attempt to rob the Northfield Bank.

"I play Younger," Robertson said, still wearing the beard he grew for the part. "He got shot 11 times in that raid and spend 25 years in prison.

"Jesse James was a part of his gang, but he bugged out during the raid and escaped by wearing women's clothes."

In his research Robertson travelled to Oregon and Kansas to talk to members of the Younger family. He found them close-mouthed but unashamed of their outlaw forebear.

"Younger was a good 'bad-man,'" Robertson said. "Unlike Jesse James who suffered from paranoia and sadism, Younger was a decent guy. He had been a captain in the Confederate Army.

"If Cole Younger had lived in a different era he would have been a useful, maybe even an important citizen."

Robertson is earning a small salary for his role and accepting a healthy share of the box office receips.

"It's more than a gamble," he said. "I spent a year and a half without making a single penny and I won't start making any real money until the picture is released."

Robertson thinks the film's timing is on the button. A top flight shoot-em-up Western hasn't been made since "True Grit" and "Butch Cassidy and The Sundance Kid."

"My research and rewriting dialogue isn't just a whim," Robertson said. "I was once a newspaperman so I know something about writing. With Younger, I was just trying to get inside the man's head.

"He was pardoned from prison when he was 60 and spent the rest of his life trying to influence youngsters in trouble to go straight.

"Cole Younger died at 72 with his boots on. I enjoyed playing him."

Even more, Robertson appreciated being asked to take part in the creative development of the movie. Most producers merely ask performers to read their lines and return to their swimming pools.

TRICK-TREAT DEAL ENDS?

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Legislators are expected to bottle up a bill that would outlaw Halloween.

The measure, introduced in the House, would make it a misdemeanor to beg treats door-to-door under the threat of tricks.

NOTICE

Princess of Vancouver Sailings Cancelled

To permit annual overhaul and servicing, the Princess of Vancouver will be temporarily withdrawn from service.

On Sunday, March 14th, 1971, the last sailing from Nanaimo is scheduled at 1500 and from Vancouver at 1900.

Regular service will resume on Friday, March 26th, 1971, leaving Nanaimo at 0700 and Vancouver at 1100.

PALANCE ADDS CAREER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jack Palance says most of his movie roles have been "garbage." He enjoys music, studied and played it as a youth, so has added a new career: singer.

His first album, Palance, including three of his own 40 compositions, is selling "pretty well," the rugged-faced actor reports.

After the second album, due soon on a three-year contract with Warner Bros. Records, he plans coffee-house concerts.

Heart Attack Kills Roy Glenn

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Film actor Roy Glenn, 56, whose latest pictures were "Great White Hope" and "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," died of a heart attack Friday at his home.

Glenn, the national secretary of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, had appeared on Broadway in "Golden Boy" and the popular "Amos and Andy" television series.

Glenn is survived by two sons, Roy Jr., and Darryl, and a daughter, Renetta, all of Los Angeles.

First United Wins Easily

VANCOUVER — The offence went well but the defence caught up later and Victoria First United polished off an impressive 75-42 victory over Ottawa Rievers in Friday's opening round of the Canadian junior women's basketball championships.

Lethbridge upset UBC Thunderettes 46-45 in Friday's other game in the four-team tournament.

United faced UBC, which had dethroned Victoria as B.C. champions two weeks ago, at noon today and was to meet Lethbridge at 9 tonight. The top two teams after today's round-robin action advance to Sunday's final at the UBC War Memorial gymnasium.

Showing depth and balance, coach Mike Gallo's United team had little trouble on offence, moving away to a 35-23 half-time lead. Trish Hadfield (22), Anne McKeachie (17) and Gail Piattelli (13) sparked Victoria's slick attack.

Gallo noted an early defensive looseness, switched from a 2-2-1 defence to a 1;3;1 pattern. The move held Ottawa's fast-breaking attack to a mere 19 points in the second half.

VICTORIA (75) — Anne McKeachie 17, Trish Hadfield 22, Carole Morrisey 4, Lydia Gledhill 6, Barb Hallberg 1, Sharon Kinghorn 7, Judy Pearson 5, Gail Piattelli 13, Margo Robbie, Lynette Wren.

OTTAWA (42) — Alice Liebeck 8, Diane Cross 8, Sue Berry 3, Pat Chapman 7, Carol Klefel 4, Lynn Hiller 3, Sue Tam 4, Marion Murphy

BILL WALKER

Another week. So be it. And the latest word on the Vancouver ... er B.C. Federation of Sport alleged poll to determine the best of the century in athletics is a dancy. The final decisions, it is said, were made on Feb. 26. The next day a ballot appeared in the Vancouver Sun.

An exercise in futility? It certainly was. And in case you missed the ballot (almost everyone over here did), the heading at the top said: "You Choose Century's best." Which, in essence, means, glad to hear from you, but your vote doesn't count. One Victorian phoned to say he had written to the Federation asking for the ballot. He didn't even get a reply ... Stay tuned, there will be more, possibly next week ... Meanwhile, all the past Domino greats are planning a get-together ... At least, they won't have to tell lies. Their record speaks for itself, and also stirs up an old can of worms ... The Dominoes were dominating basketball matters so well in their hey-day that the Vancouver Basketball Commission decided they had to do something about it. And so they allowed the Vancouver League winner to strengthen its championship club with two players from UBC which was engaged in U.S. College competition at that time ... What happened? Well, The Dominoes didn't win that season. Their dynasty was at an end. A club called the Legion did, and do you know what — just before the playoff series started, two of the Victoria players, Hank Rowe and Ralph Baker, came down with the mumps. ...

With the Vancouver team strengthened, and the city club below par, it was suggested that perhaps it would be only fair that Victoria be allowed to draft some player help. No way, said the B.C. Basketball Association. So Vancouver won, by 17 points, in three games ... Players on that city team have often wondered what would have happened if the manpower situation had been reversed ... Which may, or may not, serve to prove that the Vancouver syndrome was in existence in those days as well ... And if this is bad-liver week, why not go on? For there was the reminder submitted, too, about a Victoria's team performance in the North American soccer championships ... This was an international feature, and a B.C. centennial event, too ... Soccer fans will readily recall that it was four years ago that Victoria O'Keefes played their way to glory, and if Vancouver was aghast at the turn of events, it was positively jealous.

The tournament of champions originally had been set up with an eye toward a Vancouver team as the B.C. representative club. Then, hopefully, eventual victory in the Kennedy Cup competition would follow. Vancouver would be the soccer capital of the western world. Check it if you like. It's true. But suddenly all manner of things went awry. Victoria had spilled the fruit wagon. O'Keefes were in. Vancouver was bitter. There was no immediate rush of congratulations from the Vancouver teams, or wishing Victoria well, or promising the Islanders their undivided support ... Rather, there was tantamount to what was an attempted boycott of the games at Empire Stadium. This was Vancouver country. Fortunately, this was only a minority at work and the to-hell-with-Victoria plan didn't exactly pan out. But when the Vancouver players openly cheered for the visiting clubs, and degraded the Islanders, the ill-feeling grew, and has lived on ... Yup. Victoria won the Cup.

Gosh, and the submission by Ivan Temple of the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association can't be overlooked either ... Among other items, Ivan points out that the Vancouver image is really tarnished over the treatment accorded the Powell River hockey team ... Vancouver didn't want Powell River in its realm, Ivan said, and so when the ferry service between the Island and the mainland was improved a few years ago, the Island said, sure, we'll be glad to have you ... Powell River was welcomed to the club ... The pulp town lads were so grateful for a friendly home that they decided to show their appreciation in a positive way. The simple ending to the story is that they won the Canadian Intermediate Hockey championship ... Not a star-studded jewel in hockey's diadem, but the championship of their class, and representing the Island, to which they had been shunted so unceremoniously a few seasons ago. ...

And if some of this week's work has had all the earmarks of a hate-Vancouver campaign, that's all right. ... It isn't exactly the showcase for sport it makes itself out to be, then or now.

Still, there are happier moments, such as when Mary Matheson sauntered into the office this past week and explained next week's Inter-Club Ladies' Bonspiel: "These are club rinks, you understand. None of them are stacked!"

Yes, Mary.

NBA Rule on Signing Ruled Law Violation

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal district court judge in Los Angeles has ruled the National Basketball Association's rule against signing collegians before their college class graduates violates anti-trust laws, the Seattle Times said Friday.

The Times said Judge Warren Ferguson ruled Seattle SuperSonics player Spencer Haywood is free of the NBA restriction.

The NBA had tried to prevent Haywood from playing with the Sonics. Haywood signed with the Sonics after quitting the Denver Rockets of the American Basketball Association.

RAMS HIT TYEE TROUBLE

It might have been case of too many cooks spoiling broth on this play Friday in opening round of Vancouver Island High School basketball tournament as two members of Mount Douglas Rams — John Jenner (12) and Jim Duddridge (10) both go up for rebound and see ball squirt away. Ready to pounce on ball are Ernie MagLagan (4), Ken Lund (14) and Peter Marcin (13) of Campbell River Tyees while Brian Wright (13) of Rams watches action. Marcin was one of Tyees who produced big trouble for Rams, scoring 18 points as Campbell River crew tripped last year's champions 56-48. (Robin Clarke Photo.)

Braves Barely Escape; Tyees Trip Champions

By DOUG PEDEN

Belmont Braves struggled in a Trojan trap until the closing minutes and barely escaped disaster Friday night as they wrapped up an opening-round game in the 41st annual Vancouver Island high school boys' basketball tournament with a 53-44 triumph over the hustling Qualicum Beach Trojans.

Less fortunate were the Mount Douglas Rams, winners of the tournament crown last year, who ran into some spectacular, long-range shooting by Campbell River Tyees and dropped a 56-48 decision to the third-ranked of the four northern zone clubs.

Tyees were the only up-Island contenders to remain in the championship scramble after the heart-thumping action in Friday's first round ended at the University of Victoria gymnasium.

Oak Bay struck a big blow for the southern zone by overpowering Port Alberni Chieftains, the top-seeded up-Island team, in a 55-34 battle, and Victoria High Totems scampered to a 38-30 victory over George Vanier Towhees of Courtenay in an error-studded struggle.

Ranked first in the southern zone after winning the Victoria league title, Braves were heavy favorites to knock off the Trojans, rated fourth among the visitors, and they appeared on their way to a comfortable triumph after stretching a 12-11 lead into a 22-14 margin in the second quarter.

Then they made the mistake of abandoning their usual style and began scrambling with the Qualicum Beach boys, who quickly became favorites of the fans with their determination and enthusiasm.

Making hustle compensate for what they lacked in finesse, the Trojans started beating the Braves to the ball under the boards and charged into a 20-20 deadlock before a late basket gave Belmont a 24-22 advantage at the half.

Braves continued in the trap of playing the Qualicum style and it was anybody's game through the next 12 minutes, and the count was knotted at 40-40 with less than five minutes remaining.

Edmondson a Steadying Influence

Then six-four Lee Edmondson, who was used sparingly after running into early foul trouble, stepped back into action, and the Braves were suddenly back on the beam.

With Edmondson steadying his club and contributing eight points to the closing drive, Braves pulled into a nine-point lead and were safe from disaster.

Edmondson wound up with 14 points and clubmates John Hunter, Jim Kupiak and Jim Merz added 12, 11 and 10.

Don Boyd, a rugged rebounder, paced the Trojans with 14 points and hard-working Richard Cooper notched 11.

Oak Bay appeared a likely candidate for top honors in the victory over Port Alberni. The Bays overcame first-period troubles to grab a 24-15 lead over the Chieftains at the half, then contained the up-Islanders with a zone defence as they controlled play through the second half.

Doug Walton (21 points), Mike Morrill (13) and Duff McCaghey (10) set the scoring pace for the Bays, who didn't allow a Chieftain sniper to reach double figures.

Errant passes and fumbles by both clubs marked the clash between the Totems and Towhees, who finally yielded to Victoria's height advantage under the boards.

Points came at a slow pace as both teams attempted to control the ball. Totems were on top 5-2 after the first quarter, 14-13 at the half an dpacked a 28-24 margin into the final quarter.

Jim Nemec was the big Totem gunner, firing 12 points in the second half to finish with a total of 16.

Peter Marcin (18) and Brian Laviolette (13) sparked the Tyees past the Rams, while Jim Duddridge (17) and Brian Wright (12) topped Mount Douglas scorers.

In today's games involving Friday's winners, Oak Bay was slated to meet Vic High and Belmont was pitted against Campbell River.

The championship final is set for 9 tonight, following placement contests at 5 and 6:30 p.m.

Chemainus Gains Provincial Meet

CHEMAINUS — Victory in the Vancouver Island playoffs has earned Chemainus a berth in the provincial high school boy' "A" championship tournamnt at Grand Forks next week.

Chemainus won the Island crown in "A" competition, open to schools with fewer than 200 boys in grades 10, 11 and 12, by defeating Ladysmith 58-32 in the final.

Theoni Cinches Cup With Fifth-Place Run

AARE, Sweden (UPI) — Gustavo Thoeni, a 20-year-old Italian from Val Gardena, today won the 1970-71 alpine World Cup with a fifth-place effort.

Austria's David Zwilling won today's giant slalom in a total time of 2 minutes, 55.95 seconds.

Sepp Heckelmiller of West Germany advanced from seventh to second place in the cup standings, clocking 2:57.27, while Patrick Russel of France was third in 2:57.43.

Christian Neureuther of West Germany was fourth in 2:57.61 ahead of cup-winner Thoeni. The Italian's time was 2:57.89 in the unofficial results.

Thoeni's main rival, Henry Duvillard of France, spoiled his chances of winning the cup by a bad first race. He collided with a gate and, unable to see for a few seconds, missed the following gate. He finished first in the second race with 1:38.48 but was disqualified for his first-race miss.

Thoeni collected a total of 155 World Cup points and will race Sunday's special slalom without any worries about the cup. Duvillard has 135 points and Patrick Russel 125.

Maplettes Sharp In Opening Game

Coutts Paces Victoria; Hamilton Girls Connect

HAMILTON — Victoria's powerful Maplettes and Hamilton Paras scored impressive victories Friday in the opening competition for the Canadian senior women's basketball championship.

Maplettes, silver medallists at the Canada Winter Games, opened the round-robin tournament with an 89-68 triumph over previously-undefeated University of New Brunswick Red Bloomers.

MARY LEADS WAY

Centre May Coutts scored 20 points to lead Victoria to its win. Angie Radanovich, Jean Robertson and Laurie Sawden added 14 apiece, Ann Van Schaik 11 and Barb Tribe 10 for the Maplettes, who led 54-30 at the half.

Karen Lee had a big 26 point evening for New Brunswick. Joyce Dougright picked up 11 points and Leslie Olmstead eight in a losing cause.

"We just didn't get going soon enough," New Brunswick coach Sandra Robinson said.

There is little chance that Victoria coach Mo Turner would have allowed the East Coast girls to "get started" any sooner. He used his bench liberally and Maplettes were always in command.

44 PER CENT

Maplettes hit on 34 of 78 shots from the floor for a hefty 44 per cent average while the Red Bloomers were good on 26 of 70 for 40 per cent.

Hamilton went ahead 30-9 in the first quarter and had an easy time posting their win, using mainly second-stringers.

Lilliam Stefure was tops for Edmonton with eight points. Bunny William, Sherlyn Poland and Marion Case scored five each.

Tigerettes found the going rough in their contest.

"The girls are not used to contact," coach Bob Townsend explained. "They don't realize they have to be rough out there, too."

Paras shot a solid 47 per cent from the floor, sinking 34 of 72 attempts. Tigerettes sank only 12 of 52 shots.

Victoria Maplettes (89) — Celia Van Schaik, Jean Robertson 14, Lorraine Tory, Angie Radanovich 14, Mary Coutts 20, Diane Brounuk 6, Barbara Tribe 10, Laurie Sawden 14, Anne Van Schaik 11, Doris Brouuk.

New Brunswick Red Bloomers (68) — G. Russell 5, Joyce Duthright 11, Karen Lee 26, L. Kirk 2, M. Watts 4, L. Olmstead 8, M. Gray 4, M. Campbell 2, A. Fenety, T. Dastarache 6.

Jayvees Stung By Bison Rally

The taller Bisons, down 40-30 at the half and behind by five points with less than three minutes to play, left a slim crowd of 250 fans limp with excitement as they pulled from behind to shade Victoria 70-67.

COSTLY MISTAKES

Crucial turnovers cost the Jayvees dearly in the final minutes. Manitoba, trailing by five, unleashed a man-to-man, full-court press. The pressure forced Vikings to commit four crucial turnovers.

Bisons also benefited from superior height advantage provided by two six-foot-six forwards and one at six-seven. Manitoba completely dominated the backboards, restricting Jayvees to only eight offensive rebounds.

Centre Daryll Rumsey whipped in 28 points, 14 in each half, to spark Manitoba while guards Brad Craig and Murray Grafton added 13 apiece. High-scoring Chris Hall paced the Gary Taylor-coached Jayvees with 28 points while Jim Hunter contributed 16 and John Campbell added 13.

WINDUP SUNDAY

Jayvees were to face Newfoundland today and complete their schedule Sunday with games against Calgary and defending champion Windsor.

Dinosaurs used backboard control and accurate shooting to down the smaller AKOs. Jim Lathrop paced Calgary with 18 points, 17 in the first half in which Calgary finished ahead 39-30. Warren Meyer added 13 points. All 10 Calgary players hit the scoreboard.

Mercredi Goal Trips Cougars

One goal was the winning margin in both scheduled games in the British Columbia junior hockey league Friday night as Vernon Essos edged Vancouver Centennials 5-4 and Penticton Broncos beat Victoria Cougars 3-2.

It was Penticton's first win in five games and it kept the Broncos on top of the league's Interior division, a bare two points ahead of late-surging Essos.

Fights and arguments in the Vancouver - Vernon game brought 74 minutes of penalties from referee Willie Papp. Three players were thrown out of the game.

Vernon took a 1-0 lead after the first period, then scored three goals in the second frame to Vancouver's two. Vernon's attack stopped in its tracks as Bob Gaston scored a power-play goal for Vancouver Centennials at 14:07 of the last period, and Mike McCarthy put another past Wayne Price two minutes later.

LAWRENCE HOT

Vancouver goalie Pat Trudell was pulled in favor of a sixth attacker with 26 seconds remaining, but the tactic failed to produce the needed goal.

Jim Lawrence, the BCJHL's top scorer, led Vernon with a goal and four assists while singles came from Rod Cox, Wayne Dye and Ed Johnstone. Vancouver's earlier goal-getters were Bill Gaston and Pat Russell.

In Penticton's winning effort, the winning goal was scored by Vic Mercredi at 13:10 of the third period, after Scott Munro of Victoria had tied the score 2-2 a minute earlier.

Bruce Cowick's second-period marker gave the Cougars a 1-0 lead before Dan Ashman and Fred Parent made it 2-1 for the Broncs in the early minutes of the final frame.

Lawrence's five-point spree virtually assured the Vernon player of league scoring honors.

Caps Dump Cubs

Victoria Cubs played it free and easy Friday and Nor'West Caps made the most of it to grab a one-game lead in the best-of-three Pacific Coast junior "B" hockey final.

Second game is scheduled tonight, starting at 8:30, and the third, if needed, will be played Sunday at 8 p.m.

Glaring Victoria defensive lapses sent the Cubs to their third straight home-ice defeat. Victoria defenceman Dwayne Holmes scored one goal on his own net (it was credited to George Lyle), and giveaways enabled the Caps to count two other goals.

SALO GETS TWO

Les Salo scored twice for the Mainland League champions while Mike Mason and Tom Jamieson added others. Jamieson also picked up three assists and was Caps' most dangerous player.

FIRST PERIOD
1. Vancouver, Salo (Jamieson) 12:28.
Penalties — G. Goddard (Van) 6:43; Lucas (Vic) 9:38; G. Goddard (Van) 14:04; Lucas (Vic) 14:37; Holmes (Vic) 15:35; McIver (Van) 17:45.

City Curler Shares Win In Scotland

AVIEMORE, Scotland (CP) — Capt. Chet Randall's rink from Canada's forces in West Germany won the Gold Plate Trophy Friday by defeating another Canadian service quartet in an extra end at the close of Scotland's Highland Week of Curling.

Randall, from Ripples, B.C., put his last rock on the button in an almost empty house on the 13th end for a 6-5 victory in the final over a foursome headed by Maj. Jerry Fosburgh of Winnipeg.

Cpl. Ken Hall of Victoria was a member of the winning rink.

They emerged at the top of 32 rinks, including three civilian groups from Canada and others from Scotland, England, the United States, Switzerland, West Germany and Denmark.

West Brom Captain Punished

LONDON (AP) — Soccer star Jeff Astle, who boasted that he made big money trading in English Cup final tickets, was fined £100 ($240) by West Bromwich Albion Friday and dismissed as team captain.

The punishment followed an inquiry by the English Football Association into reports that players had sold tickets illegally.

Astle told reporters this week that in 1968, when West Bromwich won the Cup, he made £200 by selling tickets allocated to the team.

The Football Association announced Thursday that 11 players, all unnamed, have been banned from having Cup final tickets for five years. There was no indication that Astle was one of those involved.

Softball Signings

Boys and girls between the ages of eight and 19 years wishing to play in the Cordova Bay Softball Association are asked to attend a registration session from 1 to 2 p.m. Sunday at Lochside Park.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Wheeling down alley to pound out 642 series and collect Bowler - of - the - Week award is Len Dyson, who captured men's tenpin laurels during 20th week of eighth annual competition sponsored by The Daily Times. Len, who works on cars as a hobby, earned Bowler-of-the-Year rolloff berth on May 2 with 187-224-231—642 series in Sunday Men's Commercial League at Mayfair Lanes.

Dave Griff and his Chemainus Blues mates stuck to form Friday to jump into the driver's seat in the Vancouver Island Hockey League's championship series.

Sparked by Griff's three goals, Blues tripped Stocker North Americans 5-1 in the opening game of the best-of-five series.

Griff, regular-season scoring champion, banged in Blues' final three goals after Lou Shreenan and Richard Thorne staked the first-place finishers to a 2-0 first-period lead.

Blues held a wide edge in play, out-shooting Stockers 51-30.

Second game will be played Wednesday at the Fuller Lake Arena in Chemainus and the third at the Sports Centre next Friday.

ISLAND BADMINTON . . . AT CORDOVA BAY

Injury Sidelines Rollick

The scramble for men's titles in the Vancouver Island open badminton tournament is wide open.

Seeding suffered a change of pace Friday when Canadian champion Bruce Rollick of Vancouver withdrew from the Island tourney. Winner of the men's singles title in the recent B.C. Open championships, Rollick suffered a leg injury while practicing in Vancouver Friday.

Rollick was seeded first in all events.

Up - and - coming Mike Epstein, of Vancouver, the B.C. junior champion, now moves into the favored position in the singles.

Handicap and "B" events were scheduled to be played through to finals while open competition was to be capped with sem-final action starting at 7 tonight.

Finals in all open events are set for 1 p.m. Sunday.

Conditioning Helps Zarley

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Kermit Zarley, dubbed by Bob Hope "the pro from the Moon," credits a rigorous practice program with helping him to his second-round lead in the $150,000 Florida Citrus invitational golf tournament.

The winner of the 1970 Canadian Open at London, Ont. capped a course-record-matching 64 with a birdie on the final hole, lacing an iron to within six feet of the flag to take sole control of the lead in the chase for the $30,000 first prize Friday.

Zarley needed only 27 putts and had a 36-hole total of 132, 12-under-par on the 6,849-yard, par 72 Rio Pinar Country Club course.

That put him one ahead of 1969 U.S. Open champion Orville Moody who had a 65 for 133.

PALMER SLIPS

Arnold Palmer, still muttering angrily about his putting, slipped from a leading 66 on the first round to a 68, taking two-putt pars on his final 10 holes. He was alone in third at 134.

Bob Murphy, Mason Rudolph, Julius Boros and Bobby Nichols followed at 135. Rudolph had a 66, Nichols and Murphy took 67s and Boros had a 68.

Young Jerry Heard, who had shared the first-round lead with Palmer, took a 70 for 136. South African Gary Player took a 69 for 140 and was one stroke ahead of Lee Trevino, who had a 73.

Kindersley Curlers Boost Spiel Record

McGrath's foursome clinched the 1971 title Thursday night with a 6-5 victory over British Columbia and then boosted its bonspiel record to 9-1 with a 7-6 victory over Manitoba in the final round Friday.

It was the third national mixed title for McGrath. He skipped rinks to the championship in 1967 and 1968 before this year's championship.

The only difference this year was the addition of lead Audrey St. John.

The Saskatchewan rink, that also included second John Gunn and third Darlene Hill, now holds a 28-2 record in the three national bonspiels.

They won their two previous titles in the same fashion as this year's contest, clinching the victory in the 10th round and "playing for fun" in the final game.

FINAL STANDINGS

Cohettes Set For Title Bid

Juan de Fuca Cohettes, who won five titles in the recent Island championships at the YM-YWCA pool, will get a chance to try for some Western Canada synchronized swimming honors next week.

The Juan de Fuca team that won the girls' 13-14 team championship in the Island meet has been picked to attend the Western Canada meet at Regina next Saturday.

Neglected Rangers Moving Nicely, Too

By The Canadian Press

New York Rangers have been the almost-forgotten contenders as Boston Bruins have dominated the National Hockey League this season.

Rangers have been pressing the Beantowners to impressive heights throughout most of the season, and solidified their position as the second-best team in the East Friday night with a 7-2 win over the visiting Philadelphia Flyers in the only scheduled game.

HAD HOPES BEFORE

Emile Francis, Rangers' general manager and coach, had early visions of a possible letdown by the New Yorkers who led the East Division through much of 1969-70 before going into a late-season tailspin and winding up fourth.

To forestall any possibility of complacency within the organization and the inevitable injuries that plagued the club the previous year, Francis made a number of mid-season changes.

One newcomer who has paid off handsomely has been winger Bruce MacGregor, picked from Detroit early in February. The 31-year-old veteran from Edmonton, playing on New York's so-called checking line with centre Pete Stemkowski and Ted Irvine, has been a pleasant surprise to everybody but Francis.

His two goals against Philadelphia gave MacGregor nine since becoming a Ranger. Walt Tkaczuk also contributed two goals as New York pulled 16 points ahead of third-place Montreal Canadiens but were still 10 behind the Bruins with 10 games remaining on the schedule.

SIDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Arthur Ashe of the United States qualified to meet Australian Ken Rosewall in the men's singles final at the Australian open tennis championships when he beat fellow-countryman Bob Lutz 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 in the semi-finals today.

School Rugby Finale To Benefit Tourists

When Victoria Titans and Claremont Spartans clash in the Howard Russell Cup match March 19, there will be far more on the line than simple city high school rugby supremacy.

Proceeds from the championship game will go into the coffers of the high school all-star squad scheduled to tour England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales starting April 2.

And, appropriately enough, the bulk of the touring team has been selected from the Titan and Spartan squads. That's why it will be more than just a title match — it will be a financial shot in the arm for themselves and their rugby playing buddies.

The game, scheduled for 8 p.m., under the lights at Royal Athletic Park, promises to be a rugged, hard-hitting game. Tickets are 50 cents for students and $1 for adults.

Winner of the Howard Russell Cup will advance against Shawnigan Lake Boys' School in a match to determine the high school rugby championship for British Columbia.

Proceeds from that one also will go toward the tour.

Space to Grow for Indian Artists

(Carvings, Designs, Jewelery, by Tony Hunt. The Arts of the Raven Gallery, 45 Bastion Square, through March 19.)

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice

In 1915 Diego Rivera was in Paris. He was painting in the multi-colored Cubist style Picasso and Braque and their friends had just evolved. And he was not just a "follower." He'd mastered the style, and showed promise of something strong and orignal to come.

By 1923 he was back in Mexico. His pictures already seemed the work of a different man. Rivera was making heroic attempts to regain as much as possible of his local or native artists sources, Indian, Mestizo, even colonial. His success was beyond anyone's expectations.

He worked alongside a number of similarly inspired friends, Charlot, Orozco, O'Gorman, Siqueros, who rapidly became powerful painters. Cubist influence was there somewhere, but now it was only one source among many. They studied medieval Italian fresco painting more closely.

Their real inspiration came from the humble and beautiful Mexican folk art, and the murals and sculpture of the Aztecs, Toltecs, Maya and other pre-Columbian cultures. The Indian and Mestizo sources were the central ones, the most vital.

They paid attention to the efforts of their European contemporaries, who sought a way beyond their culture. And where did these Europeans turn? To Japan, Africa, the South Pacific; these inspirations probably have not been acknowledged enough. Yet they were the real glimpse beyond, Picasso and Klee have both stated, the turning point.

There had been Van Gough, half-starved, who had plunged far into his own head, hypnotized himself, hallucinating out of his deepest source . . . his isolation amid his fellow men was more profound than a hermit's.

And wasn't this something like the "spirit identification" of the Plains Indians, or those of the Northwest Coast, who fasted in the wilderness, seeking visions, becoming spirits themselves?

Whatever comparison could be made, we know Van Gogh was untutored; his adventure became unbearable . . . the Indians had spiritual teachers (Castaneda's "Teachings of Don Juan" shows that such teaching goes on, profoundly, in isolated places).

Jackson Pollack, the American, freely acknowledged his debt to the American Indian, and to African sources. He contemplated these arts with complete sincerity, with fascination, in whatever forms were available; old masks in museums, the scratchy bebop records he followed with his dancing gestures. "Easter and the Totem," an early painting, bore down on the submerged, demon-like images in his mind.

Rivera, with the tie of "blood," sought through archeology, research, and collection of Mexican Indian art to penetrate his half-lost heritage.

He studied, he copied motifs, designs, monuments. The connection was made, something fresh happened. The Mexicans were lucky, they worked while Europe blew itself to pieces.

Some luck may fall to the Canadian Indian artists now too. Small in number, their art holds to a direct, persistent source; it has suffered but it refuses to vanish. It has survived the ravages of soldiers, missionaries, corporations, politicians, "educators," social workers, and tourists.

Mungo Martin, Henry Hunt, Tony Hunt, three generations of carvers, in the same family. Tony Hunt and his fellow artists today, dancers, singers, painters, have reached an exciting transition point. The dominant and dominating traditions of Europe are weakening fast, breaking up. The old stranglehold of gunpowder and force-of-numbers is losing its grip. We're spiritually burned-out, and we look to the Indian arts with increasing wonder.

Coast Salish and Kwakiutl, on the other hand, can feel that space to grow and revive is just becoming available.

Everywhere in the world there is the example of colonized people who have suddenly refused to go under, to lose the root, to pay all the heavy dues with a smile.

Henry Hunt, his sons Tony, Henry Jr., Richard, Alec; his family, Oscar Matilpi, Robert Whonnock, Gerry Baker, John Livingston; their friends and associates in neighboring Indian societies; these artists are beginning to enjoy the fruits of their perseverence.

Last November Tony Hunt and his family opened their own gallery; a legitimate local outlet at last, where they can call the shots. Tony Hunt's success is known and documented, but he'll be far better known if things continue as they've been going with him.

Amidst all this uncertainty Tony Hunt has found a powerful focus in his artistic tradition, one which has lost some of its prize possessions, but which always knew how to lose them, and get them back.

Beatles Top LP Sales

LONDON — The Beatles are divided but sales of their LP record albums continue to hold the world record, a Music Research Bureau survey shows.

Sales of Beatle albums totalled 56 million copies while those of their nearest rival, Mantovani, stood at 43.5 million, according to the survey.

Herb Alpert, third in the survey with more than 30 million LPs sold while Elvis Presley and Frank Sinatra shared fourth place with 25 million albums each, Music Research Bureau said.

Music Research conducted the survey for The New Musical Express, a music trade magazine.

He Learned the Horn From Bix

By HOLLIE I. WEST

Jimmy McPartland is known in jazz circles as the man carrying on the Bix Beiderbecke cornet tradition.

"Bix was my main inspiration," said McPartland, who was appearing at Blues Alley, Washington, D.C. nightspot. "He played so clean and had such a lovely tone. I liked a lot of cornet and trumpet players, but Bix was the predominant influence."

Beiderbecke, whose short and troubled life has been the stuff for numerous legends perpetuated in popular lore, chiefly by Dorothy Baker's novel "Young Man With a Horn," had a smooth, harmonically rich approach that was an alternate to the robust, soring style of Louis Armstrong. To many people, his craze for gin and carefree life symbolized the jazz age.

McPartland, 63, succeeded Beiderbecke in the Wolverineess orchestra, one of the first famous white jazz bands.

"I couldn't believe it when I got the wire to join the band," he recalled.

"I was just a kid of 17. I thought it was a joke. I think I still have the wire somewhere in Chicago. One of the guys told me it couldn't be a trick because the wire had been sent from New York. So I wired back asking for transportation money, and they sent it —$37 train fare from Chicago to New York in those days.

"The Wolverines asked me what I wanted to play, and I said anything. I knew all their records. So we played them all—'Riverboat Shuffle,' 'Copenhagen,' you name it.

"After we finished, one of the guys said, 'What did you think of that, Bix?' He was in the audience. If I'd known that, I probably would've been so nervous I couldn't have played. Bix was going with Jean Goldkette's orchestra, but before he left, we started rooming together. It was too much. He showed me a lot of things about the horn — false fingering, lip techniques."

In his youth McPartland was a member of a tightly knit group called the Austin High Gang. All students at Chicago's Austin High School, the boys had passionate interest in jazz. Their activities centered about the home of McPartland and his brother, Dick. The students were clarinetist Frank Teschemacher, tenor saxophonist Bud Freeman, drummer Dave Tough and trombonist Floyd O'Brien. Most of them went on to achieve fame as musicians.

The cornetist said his father might be called "the real father of Chicago style."

"He was a professional musician," McPartland recalled, "and we took lessons from him. He got us instruments — made violins for my brother and me from old orange crates."

The Chicago style and the spirit of Beiderbecke's playing are obvious in McPartland's performances.

(The Washington Post)

WHAT'S IN YOUR NAME?

Every letter of the alphabet is a symbol of a degree of intelligence. Through use of these symbols, language is created, and wit hit, the ability to think. ated, and with it, the ability to think. Let us tell you and PROVE to you that ing. This principle has been known down through the ages. It is basic, scientific and applicable. Thousands have proved this to their advantage, and you can too. Some Highlights Left in Season

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

In slipping back into harness after illness it is strange to contemplate the fact that for the first time in more than 25 years of reviewing concerts and plays, a whole segment of this season is missing from my personal record.

Remaining major events are few but they do include one especially luminous evening for music lovers — the visit by the Bach Aria Group on March 22.

The final symphony concert pair this weekend, the Victoria Fair preview three weeks from now of the play that is to be shown in Ottawa, and Victoria Operatic Society's spring '71 production in April are among wind-up spotlight events.

Prestige Boost

Regrets at having missed Bela Siki and Nicanor Zabeleta, two of my most fondly remembered artists of the past two or three seasons, and the distinguished pianist Walter Klien, are vain though unavoidable.

However I did have the pleasure of catching the CBC broadcast of Klien performing the Brahms D minor Concerto with Victoria Symphony.

The broadcast struck me as an appropriate and successful centennial gesture and a considerable addition to this city's cultural prestige, with laurels for achievement going to many but especially to Laszlo Gati.

So many years ago, but still vivid in my memory, is Stanley Shale's discussion of the splendors of Brahms' music — the movement of long unbroken phrases like a broad river in flood, the rich textures, the nobility, the warmth and inventiveness of his themes.

Heartfelt

Klien obviously has deeply felt and admired these elements in the D minor Concerto, for certainly I have not heard a more intelligent and at the same time more heartfelt interpretation.

This Sunday's and Monday's symphony concerts are all orchestral and if at any time in its 30-year history the orchestra has deserved the accolade of full houses, this season finale is certainly the moment.

Appropriately, Gatti has programmed Haydn's Farewell Symphony. Haydn wrote this symphony as a broad hint to his patron, Prince Esterhazy, that he and his musicians deserved a holiday.

Gati has contrasted this elegant, graceful music with the blood-curdling excitement of Ravel's Bolero, a Hungarian overture and Prokoffiev's dramatic Romeo and Juliette music.

The most important dramatic event for the end of the season is the University of Victoria theatre division production for Victoria Fair '71, Spanish playwright Lope da Vega's Justice Not Revenge.

Da Vega, who is said to have been the most prolific playwright in history — more than 2,000 plays have been attributed to him although only 470 scripts are extant — was a contemporary of Shakespeare.

Classic Form

He survived Shakespeare however, by about 20 years. His work established the classic Spanish play form for the next couple of centuries — three acts of verse dialogue in varying meters.

Among the interesting facts that are known concerning da Vega is that he was a survivor and repatriate of the ill-fated Spanish Armada.

A chronicaller of da Vega, Lord Holland, found him a playwright with a tremendous flair for the theatrically effective and held that without example of Lope da Vega, Corneille and Moliere would not have written their masterpieces.

While he wrote on almost every subject under the sun of his time, he excelled in the typical Spanish cloak-and-dagger dramas.

Justice Not Revenge comes pretty well under this heading. It is a heady brew of intrigue, jealousy, gallantry and that "point of honor" which is so typically Spanish.

The play has, like Turcaret of last summer's Victoria Fair, been adapted and translated by the director, Ralph Allen. The version will be published in due course as part of a series of Victoria Fair publications.

Bach's Crowning Works

A unique organization that places its nine instrumental and vocal performers on an equal footing, and that specializes entirely in the works of Johann Sebastian Bach, will visit Victoria March 22.

The Bach Aria Group was founded by its present director, William H. Scheide, a foremost Bach authority.

Three distinguished Canadian singers, a noted British tenor, Richard Lewis, and five outstanding American instrumental soloists comprise the group.

The Canadians are contralto Maureen Forrester, soprano Lois Marshall and bass-baritone Norman Farrow, all artists known throughout the world in concert engagements, appearances with famed symphony orchestras and by recordings on leading labels.

Lewis is a star of the San Francisco and Covent Garden operas and has been leading tenor at the Glyndebourne Opera Festival for 17 years.

The instrumentalists, flutist Samuel Baron, oboist Robert Bloom, cellist Bernard Greenhouse, violinist Oscar Shumsky and pianist Yehudi Wyner, have not only an enviable U.S. reputation but in some instances are considered among the world's greatest.

Organized in 1946, the group's purpose has been to explore and exploit the cantatas, crowning achievement of one of the greatest of all musical creators.

Over the past 25 years they have consistently revealed the truth of Albert Schweitzer's comment in his book on Bach: "In comparison with the cantatas, everything else that Bach has done appears as hardly more than a supplement."

'HER FILMS BELONG TO ALL'

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD — The voice reporters heard was shallow, at times halting.

"Welcome to Pickfair. Thank you for the good things you've said about me in the past."

Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart" of 50 years ago, wasn't there in person. She was upstairs in her room.

She had tape recorded the greetings to go with an announcement by her husband, Buddy Rogers, that a dozen of her film classics are to be reshown — some for the first time in 35 years — in 10 U.S. and European cities.

"She wasn't up to being here," a friend said. "She guards her image very jealously. She doesn't want to destroy an illusion."

The Toronto-born queen of the silent movies is 77. She made her last film in 1933 and since has devoted herself to charities, in late years rarely leaving her home.

The announcement was made at the hilltop estate named Pickfair when Miss Pickford was married to the late Douglas Fairbanks Sr. She and Rogers have been married 34 years.

Matty Kemp, a Pickford business associate, told reporters she long refused permission to show her films because "she felt the present generation might ridicule them, might laugh in the wrong places."

"She bought up as many as she could with the intention of destroying them, Kemp said.

"Buddy and I convinced her that while she owned the films physically, they belonged to the world."

RYAN'S DAUGHTER

A Million-Dollar Soap Opera

A Film Review
By PETER McNELLY

If your idea of good entertainment is sitting three and one-half hours watching a million-dollar soap opera, then by all means see Ryan's Daughter.

I wanted to like this movie, because sometimes it is pleasant to withdraw from the frenetic brilliance of today's movies.

What better way to do this than to drift among the melodious whingeings of David Lean's films. His elegant composition and steady narrative matched with the unfoolable ear of Robert Bolt's screenplays — difficult to resist.

Lean is best known for three plays are — some every few films, The Bridge on the River Kwai, Lawrence of Arabia and Doctor Zhivago.

Ryan's Daughter will do little to erase these memories.

It is a miserable movie. None of its virtues congeal. Ireland's wild west coast, the super-naturalism with which the secondary characters are filmed and the suggestions of moral power all fail to come alive.

Instead, Ryan's Daughter is top-heavy with techniques that sink its slender love story in a rut of crossed purposes.

Set in the waning days of the First World War on the Lean's film parades in epic fashion the minor tragedy of an unfaithful wife.

Sarah Miles, Ryan's daughter Rose, marries Robert Mitchum, a widower schoolteacher whose hobby is preserving flowers. He, of course, is no loving match to Christopher Jones, a shellshocked British major whose tortured experiences on the front line ruined his leg and his conscience. In return for this maiming, he received a sexual twitch of the lip — a gift from Peter O'Toole.

Jones may limp before the troops in the godforsaken village, but watch out for him in the woods. When he makes love, the trees send spasms to their leaves and spiders' threads rock in the wind.

Good grief! I'll take a fine nude scene any time over that kind of junky pornographic symbolism. But that's not all.

Once when Rose rushes into the back yard to catch a glimpse of her lover, she brushes against some lilies.

The camera, just for a moment, focuses on the bursting pollen of one of the stamens.

When Rose comes back to the house, Mitchum asks her what she has on her dress. Now I know what the motion picture censor had in mind when he warned of Ryan's Daughter's "scenes of simulated sex."

With all these symbolic lightbulbs flashing on and off, each shred of meaning gets overexposed.

I'm sure Bolt's idea in plotting the story was to suggest inevitability. But so little is at stake here that the result is merely ponderous. This has the sad effect of reducing John Mills' and Trevor Howard's talents to portraying stereotypes, the town fool and the wise and wizened priest.

It's an awful, lifeless mess, really. Gone, except for a pounding episode at the beach when all the townspeople carry guns and dynamite away under mountainous surf, is the power we expect from Lean's films.

I'd give this entire movie

LEAN

for the shot with which he ended the first half of Doctor Zhivago when Tom Courtenay as Strelnikoff blasted across the screen in a demonic locomotive.

For Ryan's Daughter is fat and dull, 90 minutes too long and riddled with cheap tricks.

On Stage Next Week

Last of the season's subscription concert series will be played Sunday at 3 p.m. and Monday at 8:30 p.m. by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Laszlo Gati.

Nightly, Monday through Saturday at 8 p.m., McPherson Playhouse audiences will be discovering why "We Must Kill Toni," a Bastion Theatre production directed by Peter Mannering.

In the University of Victoria evening concert series, the Berkshire String Quartet will present a program, Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the MacLaurin auditorium.

Guest in the House, a season series production of Victoria Theatre Guild will be seen at Langham Court Theatre, starting Saturday with curtain at 8:15 p.m. Box office opens at Eaton's on Wednesday.

Hair Has Falling Out in Montreal

By CLARK BALFOUR

MONTREAL — Montreal Hair is almost the worst kind, at least for its silent partners and allegedly for its promotion agent.

Hair, off the theatre, can be said to have roots in Montreal, the birthplace of Galt MacDermot, 41, composer of the hairy music. But Hair, which flourishes in New York, dazzled Toronto and is still sweeping (but more slowly) Europe and the United States, withered and fell in Montreal.

Nothing seemed right, except everyone who saw the rock musical while it lasted said it was great. There are a lot of references to the occult — remember what age this is the dawning of — in Hair, which might have been warning enough of the Delilah powers of Montreal.

For sign-watchers, it was on May 27, 1969, that Hair was doomed. Montreal's previously unknown oracle said it was vulgar.

The oracle is actually Marcel Piche, a 56-year-old corporate lawyer with a long connection with the theatre, a record of amateur performances and the president of Place des Arts. When absolutely everybody was talking about Hair, he said it could never come to Place des Arts.

He later explained that with less than a three-month run, Hair would lose money and he could not commit a Government arts centre to runs of that length. He said it would be ideal at the Comedie Canadienne (which also receives government subsidies but on a different basis.)

So it did, last year, open on Sept. 22 and did not last for 11 weeks. (Toronto Hair ran for more than a year to become the longest-running theatre show in Canada.)

A lawsuit and two lawyers are almost the only evidence that Montreal ever had Hair. And from Pittsburgh comes word the fallout was very costly.

Filed in Quebec Provincial Court is a writ alleging a broken contract and an unpaid bill for $1,750 in public relating, promoting and advertising by Norman Olson Associates Ltd. of Montreal.

Olson's company moved for seizure of bank accounts or any money in the box office but the Provincial Bank of Canada declared it has no account of Montreal Hair Co. Ltd. and Ticket Reservation Systems of Canada Ltd. declared it is holding no money from tickets. "At this point, we have to decide with Olson if he wants to invest in a judgment in the hopes of turning up some assets," said Philip Shaposnick, Mr. Olson's lawyer.

"We never got service of the writ ... it will be contested," replied Edward Rubin, Montreal Hair's lawyer. "I don't think he's really all that keen. If he could seize the money, he'd have a talking point. The action is not at all clear. There's no contract." (Shaposnick said the writ was served at Hair headquarters at Comedie Canadienne.)

The writ alleges that the Olson firm was hired by George McPherson for $350 a week, starting Aug. 1 for at least five weeks. It adds that Hair was pressured to break the contract and hire a competitor by that Olson Associates was assured of payment, which never was made.

Olson said the trouble began after a short article in Echos Vedettes, a local tabloid, that said Montreal Hair gaffed by appointing an anglophone promotion company. He said 13 of the 15 associates, including his wife Suzanne, are French Canadians, "It was a real racist kind of attack."

Mr. McPherson, who said he was Montreal Hair's manager, is now doing Pittsburgh's Hair at the Nixon Theatre. He put Montreal Hair's loss at $120,000.

Why did Hair fail in Montreal? "Because nobody went," said the show's co-producer, John Bassett Jr., in Toronto.

"The fact is, more people went to Hair than any other show in Montreal, but it wasn't enough. The French people didn't seem to have the same feeling for the message, or the same understanding of the intent that people in Toronto and the United States did.

"In addition, unemployment in the Montreal area is severe and the prices were too high under the circumstances. We'd only had 13 performances when those crazy separatists started kidnapping people and everyone stayed at home. The movie houses were hit badly, too."

Mr. Bassett said the production fell about $120,000 short of recovering its investment — partly "because the show wasn't as good as the one in Toronto. But I still have the Canadian rights to Hair and there's been some discussion of putting a tour on the road."

After $150-Million Investment, Tankers Will Carry Ottawa Oil

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien believes the Panarctic Oil consortium in which the federal government has 45 per cent interest will spend up to $150 million in exploration before it begins shipping oil and gas to market.

And when it does, tankers likely will play a major role in moving petroleum from Eastern Arctic island where ice is less of a problem while pipelines serve the Western Arctic fields.

These were some of the probabilities he canvassed in his Dallas speech earlier this week during an obviously fence-mending mission to soothe worried U.S. oilmen.

While publicity and controversy centred on the speech's repeated invitations for continued participation by foreign capital in northern oil development, his reasons for the assurances went largely unreported.

Chretien said the government was convinced there was massive oil and gas wealth awaiting discovery in the Canadian North. But a "significant" assist to the domestic economy will be needed from foreign investors to maintain the current rapid pace of massive economic expansion "in one of the under-developed regions of the world."

"About 10 years ago exploration expenditures throughout the whole of the Canadian North were in the order of $10 to $15 million annually," said Chretien.

"This year expenditures may jump to a total of $100 million and we expect the figure to go beyond this rate in the next few years."

The federal government entered the Panarctic consortium to help provide impetus to the development trend.

"Today Panarctic has spent $40 million . . . and by the end of 1972 will have spent $75 million in exploring for oil and gas in the Arctic Islands.

"I expect that before oil and gas actually is brought to market from the islands, it will spend at least this much again if not more."

Chretien said Panarctic's discovery of major gas fields on Melville Island and King Christian Island with the drilling of its first eight wells "is something of a record anywhere in the world" and interest is growing.

"If we maintain our discovery success in the Arctic islands we may have enough gas in the near future to make it feasible to construct a pipeline due south from this region.

"And I might add as well that while Prudhoe Bay resources may be out of the commercial reach of the tanker Manhattan, this is not necessarily so for Arctic Island oil reserves."

However, he said, current attention is rivetted on Prudhoe Bay field which clearly will have to be tapped by pipelines, at least for a portion of the transport system.

"In the case of natural gas, I think it will have to be moved all the way by pipeline and that the likely market would be in the mid-continent region," said Chretien.

Current study of the more complex ecological problems involved with a "hot" oil pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley probably would be completed by autumn and if proved feasible "a right-of-way through Canada, I am sure, can and will be made available."

These pipeline projects would require investment capital of more than $5 billion according to some estimates.

Chretien said besides the direct project benefits, the pipelines would have major significance for Canada in opening up the North and providing permanent jobs for Indians, Eskimo and Metis.

They would also induce further exploration activity and he assured his Dallas audience that Ottawa's impending new exploration permit rules will not be designed to discourage oil companies.

After 10 years of issuing exploration permits averaging about 12 years periods requiring only some $3 worth of work per acre, in order to attract companies into the high-cost Arctic ventures, the federal government will issue new regulations by June.

"Those rights already issued will not be affected but new permits are likely . . . to reduce the period somewhat and to increase the work requirement," said Chretien.

He said he was confident the new rules will strike an acceptable balance between "an adequate return to the country for the disposition of rights to exploration while at the same time not discouraging oil capital from the North."

Education Probers Called McCarthyites

By JIM POLING

EDMONTON (CP) — A provincial committee investigating non-Canadian influence on post-secondary education in Alberta is back home, somewhat battle-scarred after hearings earlier this week.

The seven-man group, headed by Edmonton lawyer Arnold Moir, took a verbal whipping at the University of Lethbridge as it concluded hearings in Calgary and Lethbridge Thursday.

Next, the committee, appointed by the Social Credit government, begins two days of hearings here but the reception is expected to be more pleasant that it was in the south.

Wednesday, Mr. Moir warned University of Lethbridge students he would not listen to criticism of the committee or the motives of the provincial government.

The university administration and faculty spokesman had questioned the committee's research methods, the validity of its results, its political slant and its terms of reference. Students described members of the committee as "McCarthyites."

VIEWS VARIED

During its first three days of meetings, the committee has heard widely-varying views on how much non-Canadian influence there is in Alberta schools and what should be done about it.

In Lethbridge, it learned from university president Dr. W. A. S. Smith that 54 per cent of his faculty is Canadian, 30 per cent American and 26 per cent from other countries.

More than half of the Americans on staff and almost all the other non-Canadians plan to become Canadian citizens, he said.

Similar figures were quoted by Dr. A. W. Carrothers, president of the University of Calgary.

Only 405 of 880 staff members at that university are Canadian citizens, he said. However, the number of Canadian instructors has been increasing in the last two years while recruitment of United States citizens reached its lowest point this term.

The university employs 196 Americans, 149 British, 33 from India and Pakistan with the remainder from 34 other countries.

The committee also learned that of the 694 professors—"the highest ranking and most influential instructors"—at the institution, 45.9 graduated from U.S. schools and 24.9 from Canadian universities.

SHORTAGE OF PROGRAMS

Many of the persons to appear before the committee have said a lack of post-graduate programs in Canada has created a shortage of qualified academics.

The shortages appeared to be most acute in the social sciences, humanities and biological sciences.

Dr. Carrothers said that when qualifications are equal, Canadian citizens and those holding Canadian degrees generally are preferred to foreign teachers.

A group of Calgary high school teachers suggested the committee recommend legislation placing a quota on non-Canadian teachers in universities.

The Calgary Council of Women suggested a two-year exemption from income tax for instructors from foreign countries be lifted. The Southern Alberta Institute of Technology, the University of Calgary Students' Union and other segments of the university community all are opposed to the restrictions.

The Mount Royal Faculty Association has suggested Canadians head all departments and 25 per cent of each department should be Canadian.

Dance Studio Reeling:

Unhappy Customers Are Stepping Forward As Management Is Entangled in Squabbles

Picture yourself going to a party once a week all year round.

Why not? Parties are fun. People are fun. And dancing is fun. Put all three together . . . and you have the famous Arthur Murray "Party Time" Dance Clubs where dance parties and socials are planned for you once a week.

Sometimes the parties are held in the studios, sometimes on the town, sometimes at an outing. It's always something new, with new people to meet, and new things to do.

—From the "Murray-Go-Round" published by Arthur Murray Inc.

By DOUG MacRAE

Item: A nurse with a net income of $3,800 has paid, over an eight-month period $1,266 of it in fees to a dance studio, which she described as "a type of lonely hearts club where participants are virtually hypnotized into taking more lessons."

Item: A retired couple, comfortably fixed, have spent $12,758 in dance lessons and social extras in less than two years. They blame themselves for being "foolish enough to be brainwashed."

Item: A widow, in her mid-60s, has had her apartment mail box broken open and a cheque for $83 stolen. She blames an instructor at the dance studio she attends.

Item: A delicate 74-year-old, twice a widow, has paid more than $8,000 to a dance studio over an 18-month period. She admits she is getting "exceptionally poor value" for her money, but keeps going back for lessons.

Her granddaughter calls her 'Twinkletoes' but the price has been $8,000 in 18 months

Her 24-year-old granddaughter calls her "Twinkletoes."

These are not big city police cases. They are documented occurrences in Victoria over the past two years, and they form part of a dirt-colored pall that is settling, deservedly or not, over the dance studio business here.

There are three operations of the type often criticized in the city: Elsie's Studio of Ballroom Dancing, 536 Broughton; Fiesta Dance Club, operated by the Fred Astaire chain, at 723 Fort; and the Arthur Murray studio, 715 Yates.

Elsie's, established 11 years ago, has been free of complaints. The firm doesn't sign students to contracts and has a clean record at the Better Business Bureau.

The Arthur Murray studio, a franchised member of the world's largeset chain is in turmoil at the moment, and the resultant hirings, firings and student bitterness have afforded a rare opportunity to peer into the workings of dance studio operations.

Trouble at the studio came to a head last week, but it had been brewing a long time.

The business had been run from 1956 to 1968 by Gisele Van, as manager and then as franchised owner. There were no BBB complaints in that period; in fact, the firm was a member of the Better Business Bureau.

The studio was bought from her by Frederic Reuther, of Denver, franchised owner of nine studios in western Canada and the United States, and subsequently sold to John Follgard in 1969.

Follgard left under a cloud in June, 1970. Since then the operation has seen a succession of managers operating under Reuther, who has ruled in absentia, the latest being of Gilbert Pierce who came from Seattle in February.

Pierce was fired by Reuther last week in a bitter dispute. Reuther now says he is going to run the club personally, blames studio troubles on Follgard, and says the rancor of students has been fomented by Pierce.

Pierce, 29, says he was trying to give students value for their money but that Reuther objected to his spending of company funds on parties for the students.

In the course of the internal troubles, people who would never consider speaking out publicly, have come forward. This is unusual in that a dance studio's greatest appeal is to shy people, often painfully shy, who hope to be brought out of themselves by learning to dance well in an atmosphere which also promises an opportunity for continuing social contact.

Other students are elderly or retired, with time on their hands. They don't want their children or friends to know they have turned to dance lessons for companionship or because they were insecure, and they are most reluctant to talk with anyone exept fellow students.

But this week they did talk, long and loud, although they asked that their names not be used. Any student names given here will be fictitious.

'I want any lessons I can get, and fast. What happens if the place goes bankrupt?'

Their circumstances, their experiences with studios, their complaints and the money they have spent, are facts.

Archie Clagg is retarded. In his 30s, he lives with his parents and draws welfare. In response to a telephone solicitation, he visited the Arthur Murray studio for a free lesson.

Asked to sign a contract for $200 in more lessons, he wrote a cheque for $150 — all his parents allowed him to have in the bank. His parents were stirred to action and lodged a complaint with the Better Business Bureau when he got into a bitter argument with them over permission to turn his welfare cheque over to the studio to make up the balance of the contract.

Nancy Primrose, 28, is a professional woman, fairly well-paid. She lives in a spartan apartment; one of the reasons is that she has paid $7,708 for dance lessons and social extras over 18 months.

She is not unattractive, but extremely shy. She has stopped going regularly to Arthur Murray studio because of what was described to her as a foul-up in records. The result of the foul-up was that 100 hours of instruction, for which she paid $2,500, has disappeared.

Miss Primrose, afraid that her colleagues might twig to her love of the dance, has decided to let the matter drop.

Mrs. Pike, the "Twinkletoes" mentioned earlier, is perhaps the classic example of the elderly dance fans who fill the studio coffers to overflowing.

At 74, she has had a full but tough life. She lost her first husband shortly after they were married, and didn't wed again until 1947. Her second husband died in 1957.

She has some income and doesn't live expensively. Dancing is her only hobby.

A small, white-haired, sprightly woman, she talked this week of her two-year connection with Arthur Murray.

"There has been no security at all for the past few months. Sometimes I'd go down for my lesson and I'd be the only one there.

"I would sit there for half an hour, then a teacher would tell me, 'Sorry, Mrs. Pike. I've got a new pupil.'

"He would say his orders are to dance with the new pupils first. But is that fair to us older pupils? We wait while they dance?

"He tells, me, 'I've got my orders.'

"But suppose I've got an appointment to meet someone for tea? (As it happens I didn't really have an appointment.)

"He says, 'I've got my orders.'

"The thing is, I've paid in advance. They already have my money. But I don't get angry. All the impatience in the world won't make things better.

"I want any lessons I can get, and fast. What happens if the place goes bankrupt?"

It's difficult for Mrs. Pike to get to the studio. She has bronchial trouble, and will make the expedition only when a friend or neighbor will drop her at the studio and pick her up again.

"I've got wonderful neighbors, very discreet, and I make it up to them with little gifts, you see.

"But it's hardly worth it now. I like to go up there for an hour's enjoyment; all I've been getting lately is worry."

Mrs. Pike is one of 10 students who signed a letter of complaint written jointly to George B. Theiss, president of Arthur Murray Inc., in Coral Gables, Fla.

The letter expressed "unhappy and most dissatisfied feelings ... but let it be thoroughly understood that we place all blame upon owner management and not upon staff.

"We have had some qualified teachers and managers who were either disposed of or forced to leave through failure to receive their pay cheques."

Among a dozen complaints listed:

● Hobby club benefits purchased under previous ownership were ignored. (The Hobby Club is supposed to provide extra social functions.)

● Subsequent club privileges purchased have not been honored fully.

● Such things as Dance-o-Ramas and Festivals paid for have been completely dropped, so time, training and money wasted.

● One Festival disallowed for failure to pay Arthur Murray Inc. entrance fee.

● Prizes from previous festivals never received.

● No attempt made for progress. Students kept endlessly on each program without any opportunity to earn certification or acknowledgement of progress.

● One student in desperation paid for hotel and air expenses to Calgary to receive a Bronze Test (an intermediate signpost of development in dance studies).

The letter had kind words for Pierce in his three-week tour as manager. And Pierce has kind words for Theiss, whom he describes as an honest man not fully aware of what is going on in Victoria.

Theiss could not be contacted for comment. Inquiries were channelled to the firm's attorney in Coral Gables, who said Arthur Murray Inc. was behind Reuther in the dispute, but would be "watching the franchise closely."

While the internecine squabble continues, the students complain — albeit cautiously.

Miss Clara Parker, like others afraid her friends and family would ridicule her dance studio activity, always paid for her lessons one at a time, in cash, because she didn't want a record in the form of cheques in circulation.

When she attempted to pay for her 14th lesson with a $20 bill, she was told by her instructor that if she came back with another one of "these things" he would throw it back at her. He said he wanted her to sign a contract.

Is there any protection in law for the Victoria student who feels he or she may not be getting a fair deal? Very little, says the Better Business Bureau, but its worth a try.

Recent changes in both federal and B.C. law, designed to protect consumers involved in credit buying, may be helpful.

In the past, promissory notes have been collectable by the finance company which buys them from the retailer — in this case this would be the studio — and the money has been collectable whether the retailer lived up to the contract or not.

Not so any more. If the courts agree that you have not been given what you agreed to pay for, you no longer are obliged to pay.

The flaw in the law is that it still is your responsibility to take the court action. The government won't do it for you.

But it still can be a potent weapon. Dance studios are not fond of the idea of facing a complaint in court, and rarely will initiate court action themselves to collect on a contract.

The studios jealously guard any tenuous good public image they may have, and dislike the idea of courtroom glare and publicity.

There are more than 30,000 active students in dance studios around the world. Organized and watchful, they could guarantee their money buys what it is supposed to.

There are people who want the camaraderie of a well-run studio, the enjoyment they get from improving their dance-floor performance, or something — anything — to fill a life that has become empty.

Shouldn't they be allowed the honest luxury of these small things?

The greatest appeal is to shy people who are seeking continuing social contact

Second 'How-Not-To' Lesson

Two projects by psychology students at the University of Victoria suggest they — and their teachers — have something to learn about the psychology of dealing with businessmen.

Bill Tindall, manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau, said today local businessmen have been complaining about a project which had students interviewing employers on how they select employees.

"The businessmen wondered why the questions didn't seem to be related to the topic and were told after the interview that the students were really doing a paper on prejudices toward hiring Indians.

"They (the businessmen) were completely disenchanted with the apparent subterfuge that was used to gain the interviews," said Tindall.

This situation comes to light while repercussions of another project last month, involving phoney letters of complaint sent to businesses by psychology students, are still being felt, he added.

But the second case is worse than the first because the students involved in the interviewing were studying under Dr. Alexander Milton, chairman of the university's psychology department, so the experiment had official blessing, said Tindall.

The phoney complaint letters, sent out last month by students of psychology professor Lorne Rosenblood, were part of a project to determine the best way of obtaining favorable results when writing letters of complaint.

Some of the letters included phrases like "profiteers like you," "shoddy merchandise" and "lying about it (quality) in your advertising."

Letters of explanation were later sent to at least some of the firms.

Tindall said it was first thought just local companies had been involved "but now we realize it is across Canada and the United States.

"We've had references to this from Montreal, Vancouver and down in the United States.

"Reference has been made to us that in view of the expenses incurred because of the complaints, one or two companies are considering legal action against the students, the professor or the university."

Tindall said at least two companies incurred "a great deal of expense" dissembling the machinery they produce to try and find the source of the problem after they had received several letters of complaint.

In another case, a Vancouver distributor was contacted by an American firm which received a complaint. The distributor was concerned about the impact on numerous other products it handles.

Tindall quoted a letter sent to Rosenblood by the national sales manager of a firm involved:

"Naturally when we receive three letters of complaint, we assume there might have been a problem and no efforts were spared to uncover the source."

The sales manager wrote that "a great deal of time, effort and expense on the part of myself and other personnel in our laboratory" were involved.

Struck Hospital Ordered To Shut Off Furnace

The war of attrition between Sandringham Private Hospital and picketers took an unexpected turn Friday evening when Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons ordered the hospital's faulty oil furnace shut off.

But the furnace was repaired and declared operational around 2 a.m. today, Sandringham administrator Mrs. Margaret Reynolds said today.

The two men who presumably carried out the repairs got through the picket line by saying they were reporters, said Jack Groves, president of the Victoria Labor Council which has organized picketing at the hospital.

Groves said it was the second time the furnace had broken down since the strike began.

Mrs. Reynolds said all kinds of electric heaters were brought into the hospital when it was thought there would be no heat for several hours or days. She said things now are back to normal.

She was asked how long the hospital's fuel supply would last, since pickets have sealed the hospital off to any further fuel deliveries.

"I think that's something I can't divulge because I have my people to protect," she said.

SOUVENIR HUNTER RIPS BAR DOOR OFF

Big Bad John nightclub at the Strathcona Hotel lost one of its swinging doors Friday night when a seaman ripped it off to show it to his friends aboard the William J. Stewart research vessel.

Today Dale G. Philpotts pleaded guilty to theft under $50 and was fined $50 and ordered to pay $23 in damages.

"This may have been just a lark," said Judge E. D. Jorre de St. Jorre, "but the unhappy aspect about it is that a charge of theft is recorded against you."

Arthur Mayse . . .

IN A WORLD THAT seems hell-bent on dehumanizing itself, I suppose it's only a matter of time before Cassette University takes its place in our education system. As Social Credit MLA Herb Capozzi envisions this electronic alma mater, it will impart learning by way of video tape and the television screen.

Since it would function without an expensive clutter of professors and instructors, such a university might well help reduce the cost of education, a word that I use loosely in this context.

But I'm not prepared to go along with Capozzi's claim that possession of such a university would make us Canada's top province in the education field. Substituting probability for wishful thinking, I suggest that what we'd get is trouble of the sort that dogs the impersonal approach to the learning process.

Far be it from me to downgrade the value of electronic aids to the modern teacher. Education — which is more than the stuffing of student minds with facts and figures — has acquired a new dimension through the judicious use of tape and screen. With their help, the teacher to whom they are available can do a more effective job of broadening horizons.

The mistake comes when those who would streamline education and reduce its costs pounce on these aids as substitutes for the live, on-the-scene teacher.

One MLA who has shown himself aware of the need for a direct student-teacher relationship is Frank Calder, NDP member for Atlin. At the same legislative sitting in which Capozzi urged an electronic university, Calder made an appeal of a different sort.

He asked that "human" teachers be sent to our hinterlands, their purpose to encourage correspondence school students who lost interest in their courses.

We have a good correspondence school setup in British Columbia. I've heard it praised numerous times by parents in remote areas who are grateful for its existence.

I know, too, that the department of education people who administer those courses often go beyond the call of duty in encouraging their pupils.

Even so, this remains substitution from necessity, to be used only where a meeting of teacher and student can't be achieved.

Expediency isn't always the most reliable of guides. And where education is concerned, the temptation to think in strict terms of expediency is better resisted.

The notion of an electronic college, or junior college, or school, is based on a dangerous fallacy. This is that students can be lumped together in the abstract, tabulated by body count, and dealt with by assembly-line methods that disregard the fact of the student as an individual.

Yet that fact can never be safely ignored, as multiversities afflicted by their very hugeness have discovered. Whatever other factors contribute to the student riots that have exploded on many a super-campus, this crowding out of individuality is one of the root causes.

I've never felt that our own school system is either as black as it's sometimes painted, or as good as it could be. But if it deals with canned education warily and preserves student-teacher contact jealously, I think it will remain in reasonable health.

Anyone who discounts the importance of that contact would do well to review his own years spent in pursuit of education.

What do you remember best — subject or teacher, or both as they relate to each other?

Unless I miss my guess, your answer will come out much as mine does when I tackle that question.

Close-linked with most of what I've learned through formal schooling and found of value in life, is a teacher who was also an educator.

One of those teachers, a professor at University of British Columbia when I had the luck to know him, died in Vancouver only a few days ago. His name was Logan . . . Dr. Harry Logan. His subject was Latin, which he taught with deceptive casualness and immaculate scholarship to a mixed bag of undergraduates.

I was not his best student, and have long since sloughed off much of what he tried to teach me. But not the respect for language and the sense of present man's debt to his predecessors on earth which he imparted to his students.

Perhaps an electronic university could also offer lasting gifts. Somehow, though, I doubt it.

French and English fabrics are used for these beautifully tailored coats with their chic lines and fine fabrics . . . One fitted coat is made of a most unusual French fabric . . . a mixture of wool rayon, polyester and jute in a striped effect with an illusive hint of sparkle . . . Another is tailored of tapestry in lovely soft colors . . . "Royal Seal" English all-wool tweeds are fashioned into double-breasted coats with wide coachman collars . . . navy, beige or pale blue in a muted plaid design . . . A dashing red worsted and a smart beige knit are both fabrics from Paris, France . . . Prices run from $140 to $165 . . . surprisingly reasonable for such exclusive fashions . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

This spring women will be able to pick up a Norell dress starting at about $550 to $600 . . . instead of $700.

Your feet will look prettier this spring . . .

We've never really liked the clumpy shoes of recent seasons . . . being of the opinion that if you've got pretty feet . . . they should be shod to show them off to advantage . . . And if you haven't . . . well, why make them look bigger and clumsier than necessary? . . . That's why we were so delighted with the new Amalfi shoes for spring and summer . . . which Mr. Munday showed us this week . . . All the dress shoes . . . and there are four new and very pretty designs in these . . . have a new softly tapered toe, slimmer, higher heel (though nothing resembling the unlamented spikes of yesteryear) . . . They're very graceful, ladylike, and unashamedly foot-flattering . . . "Honved" is the name of a smart shoe in bone, navy or curry bright-eyed kid . . . (a kid with a patent finish which is softer-looking than ordinary patent) . . . Beautifully-fitting, as are all Amalfi shoes . . . it has a cut-out on the instep, and a wee bit of strap . . . "Portel" . . . in the same shiny kid . . . has a higher heel, and ghillie-type front . . . Black or white . . . "Olivier" . . . a particularly well-fitting shoe with closed toe and open back, comes in black or bone patent kid . . . while "Tangen" . . . open back with lower heel and wide instep strap . . . is in regular kid . . . blue, bone or white . . . These new Amalfis range in price from $31.95 to $40.95 at Munday's, 1208 Douglas St., 383-2211.

There's just as much news nowadays in men's fashions as in women's.

Faience pieces from Royal Copenhagen . . .

"Baca", we understand, is a Latin word for ring . . . and it's also the name of a new series of faience earthenware by the famous Royal Coppenhagen Potteries . . . a very good selection of which you'll find at Montague Bridgman's . . . There are various ornamental pieces like vases, ashtrays and cigarette cups . . . in exquisite shapes and designs . . . Hand-made and hand-painted . . . designed by artist Nils Thorsson . . . they have a distinct character of their own . . . with their closely interwoven contemporary designs in subtle colors . . . The signature of the artist is shown in a ring on the back of each piece . . . There are big, square ashtrays . . . A uniquely shaped rectangular vase which would look lovely holding foliage . . . Tall square vases, as well as short ones . . . all in soft shades of browns, blues or greens . . . Happy the bride who receives one of these Baca pieces, thought we! . . . Be sure to look at the Royal Copenhagen crackle glaze porcelain pieces on display at Bridgman's, too . . . Smaller pieces like ashtrays, cigarette cups and the sweetest little one-of-a-kind vases for small flowers . . . tiny things just three or four inches high . . . perfect for holding a few of the first early snowdrops . . . (Just struck us what a charming gift . . . complete with snowdrops . . . for a hospital or house-bound friend!) . . . Montague Bridgman Ltd., 811 Government St., 383-0821.

No peasant, we're convinced, ever wore anything remotely resembling the "peasant" dresses from France which have just arrived at Eaton's Import Room . . . But, undeniably, they have the peasant feeling . . . low scoop necklines, gathered skirts and full sleeves . . . carried out in exciting fabrics and culminating in real elegance . . . A floor-length dress for evening is made of a re-embroidered printed georgette in shades of brown and blue . . . gathered at the waist, sleeves shirred above the elbows . . . cinched with a double silk rope belt with gold chain and tassel tips . . . A polished cotton with black background and wide border print design is from Robert Mulot of Nice . . . It's the new ankle length for after-five . . . has long sleeves and a very wide belt fastened with three ties . . . Another dress from Nice has salmon colored top, tucking into a long patterned skirt, made of some luscious fabric we can't put a name to . . . and there's a heavenly black polyester Givenchy evening dress . . . same scoop neck and gathered skirt . . . with a heavy embroidery of natural wood, gold and purple glass beads around the hem . . . really stunning! . . . And what's more, we guarantee you won't feel like a peasant in it . . . rather more like Marie Antoinette in her milkmaid costume! . . . Eaton's Import Room, 383-7141, local 242.

Ti-Grace: Pope Pius Should See Her Now

WASHINGTON (WP) — Pope Pius XII was the confessor of the fashionable Marymount School in Rome, and it was the custom, on his visits there, for a young pupil to offer him flowers.

One person chosen for that honor when she was a little girl had occasion to reminisce about it.

"There was a certain curtsy you had to do, with your knee exactly an inch off the floor. It was very hard to get it just right. We had a class in nothing but how to curtsy to the Pope. But I always fell.

"The Pope would help me up, even though I would look up at him and say, 'I'm not Catholic, you know; I'm not a Catholic.' He would just smile. He was a charming man.

"It's too bad he isn't alive today. He'd say — 'Who else?' "

Who else, indeed, but Ti-Grace Atkinson, who, in the last few days was the object of legal action, physical violence, shouted obscenities and protest prayers and services — all in the name of defending the faith against her.

The controversy arose over a speech which Miss Atkinson gave at the University of Notre Dame, in which she referred to the Virgin Mary as having been "knocked up," so that she could be used as a "vessel." This was interpreted by her critics as a denial of Mary's virginity, and therefore as blasphemy.

Miss Atkinson was in the process of trying to correct this impression when Mrs. Bozell assaulted her. "My remarks depended on the virginity of the Blessed Mother," she said. "She was impregnated supernaturally, and was therefore forced to bear the responsibility and sorrow of her supernatural child more than if he had been conceived naturally.

"Catholic hallucinations, sometimes referred to as articles of faith, are of no interest to me. I am interested only in the sadistic political practices of the church, particularly as they relate to women."

The violent reaction, she said later, was because "for the first time in 2,000 years, a woman had stood up to the church." But it was not the first time that Miss Atkinson had done so, nor the first time that she — a non-Catholic — had been called a heretic.

She was also denounced as a lesbian when she first entered the women's liberation movement in 1966, working with the National Organization for Women (NOW); and she was denounced for not being a lesbian when she began, two years later, to work with lesbian groups.

Asked about this, she replied, "It depends on what you mean by lesbian. If you mean, have I had sexual relations with women, the answer is no. If you mean, is it mostly women whom I trust and see as my friends, the answer is yes."

She broke with NOW in 1968 because she wanted to push abortion reform and they, at that time, did not. Now she is not identified with any group, although she leads a workshop in "theory construction" at the Daughters of Bilitis New York lesbian centre.

"I began to see that the lesbians were being used to get at the feminists, the same way the communist party was used to get at the trade unions during the witch-hunting years," she said. "They got at the trade unions by making those people afraid that they would be considered communists. Women used to be afraid to being called lesbians. If they get the lesbians, they'll get the feminists."

As for her own relations with men, Miss Atkinson said that, "I don't say that men are the enemy — they just act like it. I won't associate with a man on a social basis unless he has made a significant contribution to feminism. Your personal life is a political statement, and must be consistent with your politics."

Miss Atkinson was born 32 years ago in Baton Rouge, La. Her father was a Standard Oil executive. She was the descendant of "strong-minded women who went to college before women did." She is named for her grandmother, Grace-Ti-Grace, pronounced "Tea-Grace" means "Little Grace" in Cajun. In her turbulent visit here, she wore her grandmother's black cameo pin and ring for luck.

Ti-Grace and her four sisters were educated at fashionable schools abroad, most of them, but not all, convent schools. The Atkinsons are "high Episcopalian — which means nothing," she said.

Not counting her gentle teasing of the Pope when she was seven or eight years old, her first clash with the church came when she was 15 and attended the Providence Academy in Vancouver.

"I thought that if God were so fantastic — and I didn't question that he was — he wouldn't like people to grovel and kneel to him. We were taught that God wants you to stand up and fight for what you believe in — that is, what they believe in — and I didn't think he would find it in keeping with human dignity to have people kneel. I thought, who made up this kneeling scene? and when I checked it out, I found that it did not come as a pronouncement from the Pope when he was sitting in his chair and had the right hat on. The church had just made it up.

"I tried to organize people on this point, but I didn't do so well. That is, they weren't doing so well. Finally, they decided that if I weren't going to kneel — my name began with A, So I sat up front — it would be better if I didn't go to chapel at all."

So she used the early morning hours to learn to type. But one day, she woke up and found the sister in charge and the other pupils surrounding her bed. The sister had pinned signs reading "heretic" all around her.

At the age of 16, Ti-Grace ran away from home, taking "champagne flights — remember them?" until her money gave out. Her parents felt that marriage would settle her, and encouraged her to marry Charles Leeds Sharpless, a Princeton student, when she was 17.

The marriage lasted five years, and broke up mainly because "we were two different people who wanted to be in different places." Sharpless was reluctant to give her a divorce, she said, but did so when he went off to London in the service, while she remained behind to complete her Master of Fine Arts degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

During her marriage years, she had worked as a high fashion model. Although she says that feminism hadn't really absorbed her yet, she noticed that "I spent all my time searching my face for wrinkles — at the age of 18. I kept thinking, my husband's going uphill from here, and all I can go is downhill."

She was also working on a PH.D. dissertation at Columbia University on The Distinction Between Beauty and Art, and became formally acquainted with feminism by corresponding with French feminists writer Simone De Beauvoir about her theory of aesthetics. Miss Atkinson has since changed her dissertation subject to political philosophy.

When she has some free time, she likes to spend it vacationing on Corfu with her favorite sister and her brother-in-law, Gian-Berto Vanni, who is a member of the Papal nobility.

"When I heard there were Novenas being said for me at Notre Dame, I thought I'd get my brother-in-law to ask for a Papal Bull against them for misusing the Novena. I'm not Catholic, I'm not dead — I suppose that was wishful thinking — and I'm not a major religious purpose. No, and she leads the women's about that." Maybe I am a major religious purpose."

Battle Ends in a Draw

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Round Two of a scrap between the battling ladies of the conservative Buckley clan and a militant feminist and her booted bodyguards has apparently ended in a no-love-lost draw.

A replay of the Ali-Frazier fight it was not, but the public tiff between women's liberationist Ti-Grace Atkinson and Patricia Buckley Bozell at least matched the heavyweights in verbal ferocity.

Round one came Wednesday night when Mrs. Bozell delivered a smart slap to Miss Atkinson's right cheek because of what Miss Atkinson was saying in a speech at Catholic university about the Virgin Mary.

Round two came Thursday, when Miss Atkinson called a news conference to blast Mrs. Bozell's beliefs. These were parried by sharp verbal jabs from Mrs. Bozell's 19-year-old daughter and followed by a stinging one-two from Mrs. Bozell in a press release.

Round one was a quickie. Mrs. Bozell, the younger sister of Conservative Party Sen. James L. Buckley, of New York, and columnist William F. Buckley Jr., darted to the stage where Miss Atkinson was speaking, landed one slap and missed with a second, then dashed outside to kneel with others saying the rosary to protest Miss Atkinson's appearance. She shouted "To hell with Catholic university!"

Round two took most of Thursday afternoon. Miss Atkinson, looking none the worse for wear, summoned the press to fume that the attack was "a setup deal" and to charge that Mrs. Bozell is "a prostitute for her husband as well as the Catholic church."

Into the fray leaped Kathryn (Kathy) Bozell, appearing from the rear of the ring of reporters who had been firmly frisked and locked into a motel conference room by Miss Atkinson's three fatigue-jacketed bodyguards, members of a Lesbian organization called Daughters of Bilitis.

Across town a couple of hours later Mrs. Bozell issued a statement saying she sprang at Miss Atkinson because the tall militant was making "an illiterate harangue against the mystical body of Christ" and was "defaming the Mother of God and God Himself in the vilest possible manner."

Not so, claimed Miss Atkinson. In fact, she said, she had never even made supposedly blasphemous remarks about the Virgin Mary in a speech at the University of Notre Dame attributed to her in Triumph magazine — a conservative Catholic monthly edited by Mrs. Bozell and her husband, Brent.

Classroom Drama a Habit for Sister Georgiana

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

After "more than 40 years" teaching in schools from Vancouver to Halifax, Sister Georgiana is sure her career is just beginning.

"This year in Victoria has given me a new urge to live, a new lease on life," she said in an interview at the Queenswood House of Studies, where she is staying while attending the University of Victoria.

"The students have accepted me beautifully," she added triumphantly.

But before she starts a new career, Sister Georgiana plans to complete the task she started in the early 1960s — integrating developmental drama into the Nova Scotia school system.

"I always had a natural tendency to teach through drama," she explains.

"Drama is to me the very heart of life. It animates every other subject. It is not a sideline.

"I can testify from 40 years experience with children about what this can do for them."

Developmental drama, sometimes called creative drama, isn't new. Teachers have had their children "pretending to be . . ." for years, encouraging them to use their imaginations.

The techniques can be carried into art or the production of a play, and can also be applied as therapy, helping the patient discover and, hopefully, overcome his problem.

Sister Georgiana is currently co-authoring a syllabus, under the direction of Professor Richard Courtenay, that is designed to explain to other teachers how they can introduce developmental drama in their classrooms.

Sample lessons are taken from textbooks the teachers will be using.

Sister Georgiana herself is full of examples. Leaping to her feet, she demonstrated how she taught a class "motion words" by walking into a room, then challenging them to come in a different way.

Jumping from table to chair, she explained how she coached a class to recite the poem "Spring Herald" for a drama festival. With only a week of work, the class made 96 points in the judging.

"But I don't really approve of festivals," said Sister Georgiana, "because they are competitive."

A member of the Sisters of Charity in Halifax, Sister Georgiana began her teaching career in Massachusetts.

She taught in several schools in the Eastern United States, in Quebec and Vancouver before going to Nova Scotia, where she was born. She has taught every grade from one to 12.

As soon as she settled in Dartmouth, she joined the recently formed Canadian Child and Youth Drama Association, becoming the first public school teacher to join.

This group had been introduced to the developmental drama concept by Richard Courtenay, one of the foremost experts on the subject, and began working to get it into the school system. They presented a brief to the minister of education, and Sister Georgiana began lobbying.

"I would go to Home and School meetings and get everyone excited about developmental drama. They would ask what they could do and I would tell them to write to the minister of education. We tormented the poor man with our letters.

Developmental drama was written into the Nova Scotia school curriculum last spring. Sister Georgiana hopes it will be fully in use by 1972.

Richard Courtenay was in Nova Scotia last March conducting a workshop, and was asked by the school authorities to prepare a syllabus showing how developmental drama could be correlated with the language arts program.

With this accomplished, Sister Georgiana decided to request a year's leave of absence to study developmental drama more closely.

"I had taken every course I could get in the U.S. and Canada in the summer on drama," she explained. "But I wanted to become immersed in developmental drama. You might say I wanted to become impregnated with it — and that's from a nun!"

The leave of absence was granted and she began to apply to schools all across the continent, asking if their drama programs could give her what she wanted. In almost every case the reply was the same: They couldn't.

She found that only the University of Victoria provides the type of instruction she wanted, in courses given by Richard Courtenay.

Since Sister Georgiana was familiar with the Nova Scotia school curriculum, Courtenay suggested she prepare the syllabus as a class project.

Sister Georgiana plans to go back to Dartmouth next year. "I could be drawing a pension, but I won't until I see this program in the schools."

Once that is done, she plans to apply her knowledge of dramatic techniques to counselling.

"After the year is finished here, I will go to the Institute of Pastoral Theology in Vancouver to take a course in counselling.

"I hope to use theology and drama as a method of helping people develop themselves.

"I've learned a lot about children and I hope to become a liaison between parents and teen-agers. I want to work with people in underdeveloped areas. I feel I am only beginning my life's work.

"Of course," she added with a laugh, "I plan to live forever."

Scientist Explains Testing Procedure

By KEN KELLY
CP Science Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists checking food safety have found samples of salami, sausages, bacon and mushrooms containing a potent cancer inducer, dimethyl nitrosamine.

One salami and one sausage also contained an unidentified nitrosamine.

Dr. Ross Chapman, assistant deputy health minister, reporting on the findings in an interview, said the significance as a health hazard of these trace chemicals in such low concentrations is unknown.

But food and drug authorities are concerned about their presence in foods and about the possibility that nitrosamines might be formed in the digestive system. This could happen from the chemical combination in the body of the nitrates and nitrites in certain foods and from amines in meats.

For that reason, the law strictly limits the amounts of nitrates and nitrites which may be used in foods as preservatives and coloring agents.

"We know that man has been exposed to traces of nitrosamines since he began using nitrates and nitrites, and that was a long time ago," Dr. Chapman said.

But because it seemed important to determine the cancer-inducing potential of nitrosamines, the food and drug directorate has been conducting tests with guinea pigs.

Over a long period they are being fed with known levels of dimethyl nitrosamine and sodium nitrite. The hope is to find the cancer-producing potential and then go on to study normal diets for any adverse effects from levels there.

Nitrosamines also have been reported in smoked fish in the United States, which permits use of nitrites in the preserving process in this food. Canada and some other countries do not allow nitrites in smoked fish.

In the face of the possible hazard associated with nitrates and nitrites, the sensible thing might seem to be to ban them altogether. Bacon and ham of a grey color and different taste might be considered worth it.

Not so, says Dr. Chapman. Both chemicals provide important protection against food poisoning, including a fatal type of bacterial poison, botulism.

The food scientists began lowing reports in world scientific literature of their presence in meat, fish, cheese, flour and mushrooms.

They picked up in different parts of the country 10 samples of wheat, 24 of cheese, 21 smoked fish, nine frozen or pickled herring and 36 different meat products including corned beef, bologna, canned lunch meat, smoked sausages and bacon.

Dr. Chapman said this kind of periodic monitoring for all kinds of harmful contaminants really amounts to putting out brush fires.

He would like to have the financial and manpower resources to do it on a more organized and systematic basis.

The plan for such a network has been drawn up. The extent to which it can be implemented depends on the resources the federal government allocates over the next two years.

Dr. Chapman says that if this kind of network had been functioning in the last few years "we would have picked up the mercury in fish at a much earlier stage."

Unsafe Car Seats Endanger Children

TORONTO (CP) — Most car seats and restraints for children are unsafe, Joy Moon, head of the child safety division of the Consumers' Association of Canada, said Thursday.

Mrs. Moon said in an interview only two of the nine safety devices recommended by the Ontario Safety League provide a satisfactory degree of safety.

George Ham, manager of family safety department of the Ontario Safety League, said his organization recommends nine specific car seats and restraints for children. But because there is no Canadian legislation governing standards, the league endorses all devices that meet U.S. federal motor vehicles standard 213, effective April 1.

"I'm just horrified that they (the Ontario Safety League) should even mention some of them' said Mrs. Moon. "Parents will be lulled into a false sense of security that they are safe."

She described the U.S. legislation as being so "watered-down" it will do little to ensure safety for children.

The only test U.S.-manufactured devices undergo to be approved is one to determine strength, she said.

"But this gives no indication of what will happen in a car crash."

Mrs. Moon estimates one million of more than two million Canadian children four years of age or less use seats or restraints.

"But there are fewer than 1,000 seats in the whole country that can be considered satisfactory," she said.

Mrs. Moon said of 37 safety seats and restraining devices tested by the University of Michigan, only two provided satisfactory protection for children.

Some were found to increase the danger to children in a collision, she said.

Mrs. Moon said the most dangerous type was the chair that hooked on to an ordinary car seat. Tests showed it tended to fly off in a collision.

"When you see films of the test and watch how a $24.95 seat with lots of padding crushes up a dummy, it sticks in your mind," said Mrs. Moon.

She is also critical of safety harnesses that strap children securely to seats but provide no protection for their heads.

"Children differ from adults in that their heads are as much as one-third of their total weight. An adult's head is about one-tenth of his total weight."

Thus in a collision, when a child's body is firmly secured but his head is not, "he suffers no brain concussion but has a broken neck."

Mrs. Moon has been working for the last six months to have Ottawa pass legislation governing the manufacture and sale of safety seats and devices in Canada.

Unsafe at any speed applies to car seats for children as well as cars. The little girl, Roni Sale, of Toronto demonstrates one unsafe position children assume when car seats or restraints are not used. She would probably suffer head injuries in an accident. Using the average car seat she would most likely end up with a broken neck. (CP Wirephoto.)

Handicrafts In Fashion

Trends these days really move fast. Only two years ago, who would have thought that hand work would be getting for itself an entire issue of a leading fashion magazine? Two years ago, Women's Wear Daily was sneering at Mrs. Hubert Humphrey for making her own clothes.

Once upon a time, every woman did hand work.

Then came the industrial revolution, and by the time the 19th century had passed, hand crafts were falling into disfavor. They now signified poverty, so that by the 1920s the sewing pattern business had almost hit bottom. The Depression didn't help, either, as lots of women did indeed become poor enough to go back tomaking their own.

Of course, there have always been those who simply enjoyed doing hand work because it was creative, but they were generally regarded as being little old ladies or nuts with beards who set up hand looms in lofts and starved for their peculiar art.

Since the Second World War there have been signs of a return to hand crafts.

What has brought about the sudden change? How is it that if a $500 outfit now looks as if it were made by your little nephews all the fashion crowd will do nip-ups over it? It's the youth influence, of course. We're still hung-over enough about youth to believe that anything it endorses must be a status activity.

Nixon's Experiment Angers Press Corps

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most of Washington's women's press corps demonstrated in the White House press room Thursday singing "We shall overcome" because President Nixon excluded them from an interview nine of their colleagues attended.

Led by syndicated columnist Sarah McClendon the women sang the protest song and made other gestures that one observer summed up as being a "mutiny."

"There'll be no bra-burning here," said Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren, who unsuccessfully tried to control the demonstration.

The excluded reporters besieged Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and Mrs. Connie Stuart, Mrs. Nixon's spokeswoman. They said they were told to come to the White House for a news conference.

Ziegler, red-faced, said they could listen to a tape of the interview, but the president had decided to limit the size of the group.

Ziegler said Nixon was experimenting with several formats with the public through the press and this interview was one of them.

The interview to be published in Sunday papers deals with Nixon's reminiscences about Mrs. Nixon and their family. Mrs. Nixon celebrates her 59th birthday Tuesday.

Municipal Chapter Meets

Mrs. Nicholas Kalyk, president of Provincial Chapter, will attend the annual meeting of Municipal Chapter of Victoria IODE.

The meeting will be held Monday evening in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss Street. A reception will be held at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Alison and Constance Chrow will give a talk on Impressions of South Africa and show films taken during their recent trip.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Buttoned Lip

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have two sons, married to girls I dearly love, and I hope the feeling is reciprocated.

One son is meticulous in his appearance and the care of his clothes. The other son, while a perfectionist in his work, is very negligent about his personal appearance. His clothes are often in need of pressing, cleaning, buttons, etc.

Don't you think that a wife should systematically go through her husband's wardrobe and keep his clothes in good condition? When my husband was alive, I devoted each Monday morning to this purpose and found him most grateful for my interest.—Non-Interfering Mother-in-Law.

DEAR NON: What you are trying to ask is, "How can I get my daughter-in-law to take better care of my son's wardrobe without damaging our relationship?"

You may not be able to. But since your son is old enough to be farried, he's old enough to ask his wife's assistance in keeping his clothes presentable, if indeed he cares about his appearance. If neither he nor his wife care, no matter how many buttons you notice "missing," continue to keep your lip buttoned.

DEAR ABBY: In regard to abortion: Women must learn to say NO to their husbands more often. In fact, everyone must say no to evil. We are now living in a warring, whoring, boring world becaiise we have forgotten God's word. Jesus told us that if a family cannot afford more children they should quit having sex.

I have never married or had sex even tho I have been asked. If a person can say no to evil once, it is a lot easier the next time.

Jesus also said, "Love the sinner, but hate the sin." People today have it turned around. They love sin and hate the sinner. If I sound holier than thou it is because Christ has made me holy.—A Saved Woman.

DEAR SAVED: You insist upon equating sex with sin, and feel that the absence of sex has made you somewhat "holy." Theologians (and indeed Christ Himself) would disagree with you.

DEAR ABBY: They say "time heals all wounds," but this wound of mine has not healed, and it has been 10 years.

A neighbor boy (I'll call Jim) is the living image of my husband, John. I have a son Jim's age, and they are constantly taken for "twins." John and I have discussed it, and he weakly denies that it is anything more than a coincidence. I know better. A year before Jim's birth there was ugly talk about this neighbor lady and my husband.

The older Jim gets, the more he resembles my husband. There is talk, even now, and I can understand why. I try not to blame anyone, least of all the innocent boy, but it is so difficult for me to have to look at him and members of his family nearly every day.

How can I put this out of my mind? Moving is out of the question. The other family must hear the gossip, too. Don't you think they should move? We were here first.

John is a wonderful husband and father to our children. I can't go on this way. Is there a solution?—Trapped.

DEAR TRAPPED: My only suggestion would be for you and your family to move. You say, "It's out of the question." As I see it, it is out of the question for you to remain where you are. It would be well worth any sacrifice you'd have to make in order to relocate.

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS

To gain a pawn in the opening it is worthwhile to lose one move. To gain a pawn it is seldom worthwhile to lose one move and the attack, against a good player. To expend two moves with a knight to win the exchange is rarely advisable.

BEN ISRAEL'S VICTORIOUS LOSS

The Jews of Bialyastok love to tell this fable.

Fathers tell it to sons when they teach them chess. The fathers heard it from their fathers — and their fathers from theirs.

Around the beginning of the 18th century, a chess tournament was arranged in St. Petersburg. It had the royal patronage of Peter the Great. The prizes were high and, as it was an open competition, players came from all parts of Russia, some from Austria and Germany, a few from Italy, two from France and one even from England.

In Bialystok, there was a Jeshive (Jewish student) youngster by the name of Ben Israel, who could beat everyone in and near the city at chess. When news of the tournament in the capital broke, the chief of police, a keen enthusiast who had played Ben Israel at least once a week, conceived the idea of sending him to participate.

The tournament was conducted on the basis of elimination: A loss meant you were through; a draw, another game. The first four the better of the opening. Ben Israel. In the fifth, he met a German opponent, who had the better of theopenin g. Ben Israel had the Black pieces but, in the middle game, he saw a chance for perpetual check. Thus he drew. That same night they started a second game and this time Ben Israel made no mistake and won.

When the final round was reached, a Frenchman was left to play Ben Israel.

The Frenchman started off with his King's pawn. Ben Israel answered rapidly. After a while, the Frenchman had his usual cognac brought to him, and Ben Israel his glass of water. One hour elapsed, two, four, six — it was a fight to the finish! After the eighth hour, Ben Israel moved his pawn to King's Bishop's seven and announced mate in two moves. The people in the room became delirious. A Russian had won!

All at once, a silence fell over the assembled crowd. Soldiers had forced their way to the table, and a young officer of the King's Guard handed Ben Israel a letter. It was an order from Peter the Great that Ben Israel was to present himself at once at the court. Ben Israel went, surrounded by soldiers. On arriving before King Peter, Ben Israel bowed his head and then stood erect.

The king addressed him: "Your victory was great, but not quite finished. You have yet to play me!"

Fear gripped Ben Israel's heart. If he beat the king, what would befall the Jews? Hadn't they suffered enough already? Yet, if he lost, the scorn would be even greater. What was to be done?

Suddenly, he came to life and addressed Peter the Great. "Sire," he said, "your request flatters me beyond words. But I can play you under only one condition: That I, Ben Israel, play in your name, Sire, and you play for me!"

A hush fell over all assembled. Peter looked around him and then started laughing. "Wonderful," he exclaimed, I accept!" And the Czar's pieces, guided by Ben Israel, won easily.

After the game, Peter the Great, still impressed by Ben Israel's brilliant stroke, wrote out a special order by which domicile was granted to Ben Israel, his family and descendants to live in St. Petersburg.

Anti-Plane Noise Drives Form on Peninsula

A struggle against increasing air traffic noise around the Victoria International Airport is being waged on two fronts on the Saanich Peninsula.

The Sidney and North Saanich Society for Pollution and Environmental Control is beginning an anti-airplane noise campaign while Sidney council, led by Ald. Norma Sealey, is considering eliminating residential development for the airport vicinity.

The local SPEC branch will meet April 13 to air the results of a recently completed study and will have a psychologist on hand to discuss the effects of noise on humans.

Figures from the department of transport show that Victoria airport is becoming increasingly popular with practising commercial pilots. In January, 138 simulated approaches were made over this airport in comparison with 104 over Vancouver airport.

Dr. Joan Coldwell, chairman of the SPEC noise pollution committee, said that use of Victoria airport for trial approaches has increased by 33 per cent since 1966.

Ald. Norma Sealey conducted a personal investigation into sound pressure levels over Sidney last fall and says that half the residents of Sidney live within the "inner zone," areas over which aircraft noise exceeds 110 decibels.

A map showing swathes of sound over this part of the peninsula has accompanying DOT recommendations that land in the 110-decibel or more range should be zoned "other than residential." Residents in the area between Beacon Avenue and Weiler are most afflicted.

Matters are potentially worsened by the extension last fall of a main runway. Sound swathes around runway 08 (which ends just outside Sidney's borders) range from 120 decibels to 85 decibels in contours touching the town's north and south borders.

"Vibrations of more than 85 decibels can cause bodily damage even when the ears are plugged," claims Ald. Sealey. "Noise exceeding 110 decibels may not be painful but can actually cause bodily damage."

Land uses suggested by the DOT for high sound pressure zones are agricultural (but no poultry), commercial (except for stadiums), industrial and municipal utilities.

Atlantic 71

Announcing a great new way to cross the Atlantic to anywhere in Europe, and how it works.

Let's start with the first person you'll talk to: your travel agent.

From now on, he's an Atlantic 71 Information Centre. A goldmine of information and friendly tips. Ask him for our special tours, brochures and routings. And look for the Atlantic 71 symbol in his window.

Direct booking—about the only thing we can't do is pack your bag.

Enter Reservec 2—the slickest, quickest reservation system we've ever had. From your one call, it can arrange everything from flights, connections, salt-free meals to sky-cots and special seating.

We've eliminated the "where do I check in?" question.

Just look for the arrows identifying the Atlantic 71 check-in counter; you can't miss it. From there, our easily identified (and specially trained) Atlantic 71 people will smooth your way through tickets, baggage and boarding.

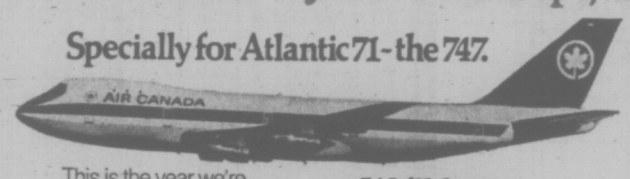
Preboarding: women and children first!

Remember we mentioned special seating? If you're travelling with kids, just let us know in advance and we'll meet you and assist in settling you and your brood comfortably ahead of adult passengers. Same goes for elderly passengers, of course.

The people who'll look after you for Atlantic 71.

The tops. Because our most experienced people will fly Atlantic 71 this year. And by "experienced" we mean more than the way they mix martinis. It's little things like recognizing (and overcoming) a first-flighter's shyness, the pillow that appears just as you're nodding off, the hair-of-the-dog for the over-hung, the reassuring word to the grandmother returning home after 40 years. These girls know their business and their business is you. Look for them in their sassy new pant-suits and for the striking Atlantic 71 insignia.

Specially for Atlantic 71—the 747.



This is the year we're rolling out the big guns—the fabulous Boeing 747's, Toronto to London. And Toronto/Montreal/Paris/Frankfurt. With Flight Directors. Movies. Stereo music. Bar. With 4 seasons decor. A special no-smoking zone, and of course, those special Atlantic 71 stewardesses.

We speak your language.

There's always someone on board who speaks the language of the destination.

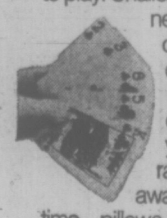
And now, for the finer things of flying Atlantic 71.

Here's where all the expertise of Atlantic 71's executive chef comes into play. He's travelled the world to select menus specially for this year, from hearty breakfasts to truly gourmet dinners. And a wine selection that would delight and surprise even the most discerning "grape-buff"

To sleep or not to sleep.

After dinner there's always something doing! Your stewardess will turn on a whole library of newspapers and magazines, for starters: Life, Look, Reader's Digest, Playboy, Punch. Actualité, Der Spiegel.

And writing materials, post-cards, stationery, games people like to play. Challenge your neighbour to cards, bridge, cribbage, checkers or chess! Mind you, if you'd rather snooze away your spare time—pillows and blankets coming up!



We'll keep the kids busy too.

European holidays are great fun for kids, but let's face it—6 hours or more in a plane isn't always so. If eating "real neat" meals and drinking free soft drinks can't keep your youngster down—we'll turn on story-books, comics, games, and toys!

Maybe they can even meet the Captain, how's that? For babies, tuck them away in our safe 'n snug sky cots. For diapers, baby food, bottles, bibs and baby paraphernalia—just ask your stewardesses (it'll save you packing them and you can pick up what you need in Europe).

Atlantic 71—fares that actually challenge charter.

Talking about kids (and you can work this out with your travel agent)—our new 29-45 day fares could possibly be cheaper than charter if you're flying with children under 12, and give you more freedom with departure times.

Atlantic 71 know how.

25 years of European experience have gone into the making of Atlantic 71—that's how long we've been flying from more places in Canada to more places in Europe than any other airline. So we're bound to know more about the Europe you want to know—ask your travel agent about our tour packages!

Lost a button? 5 o'clock shadow?

toothbrushes and paste, cologne, lotions, sewing kits, aspirin, you name it—and you'll get it. Pronto.

In 24 cities throughout Europe, you'll find our special Visitors Bureaux. Just look for the Atlantic 71 symbol. Use it as a rendezvous point. Headquarters. To hold overseas mail. For hotel accommodation. Theatre tickets. Advice on shops. To contact English-speaking doctors or dentists. We're always there to help in any way we can.

Atlantic 71 in a nutshell.

It is a great new way to enjoy your transatlantic flight as much as your holiday in Europe! Because we think your holiday should begin when you get on your plane—not when you get off in Europe. So we've mentioned a few new Atlantic 71 features and there's more coming. Watch this space.

Bus Deck Planned For Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Directors of the Golden Gate Bridge have approved installing a second deck on the majestic span, but it won't alter the familiar appearance of the 34-year-old suspension structure.

The second deck is part of a $331 million long-range transit plan approved unanimously Thursday to relieve traffic congestion.

Before the plan becomes reality, it must be approved by the California legislature and federal funds would be needed to help local governments, which would have to raise a portion of the cost.

The transit plan is keyed around using a speedy bus system on the second deck, to be installed in an already boxed-in framework beneath the present roadway.

The second deck would cost an estimated $66.5 million, with access and egress through tunnels that boost over-all cost of the busway to $204 million.

Finland Is Different From Canada: The People Are Nuts Over Architects

By JOHN BUCHANAN

HELSINKI — "Finland's too much like Canada; why go there?"

It is a remark Canadians sometimes make when it is suggested that they consider Finland in Scandinavian tour plans or as a holiday destination in itself.

The answer is that Finland is not like Canada at all although there are areas of resemblance. Its interior could be mistaken for northern Manitoba or Saskatchewan, it is a thickly forested land, it has an abundance of lakes (60,000 of them), and as a nation it is officially bilingual.

There the similarities largely end.

Despte its location on the roof of Europe (the same latitude range as the Yukon) and small size (two thirds that of the Yukon), Finland is home to 4,700,000 people who talk about their architects, designers and musicians the same way Canadians talk about hockey stars. It was a Finn, remember, who designed Toronto's new city hall.

Thanks to the Gulf Stream the temperature of Helsinki, which lies further north than the northern boundaries of Canada's western provinces, is on par with that of Victoria in summer and Toronto in winter. And it gets less snow and rain than Toronto.

Finns have made names for themselves in design and manufacture of a range of products that include glassware, ceramics and furniture. Even an ordinary item like a kitchen knife has a certain elegance to it here. A factory at Lahti is the largest producer of furniture in Europe.

Finns have also become major boat builders and today build more ice-breakers than the rest of the world put together. With the rise in tourism, they have taken to designing and building holiday ships specifically for the cruise trade.

This capital of Helsinki makes an ideal take-off point for any tour of Scandinavia and from Canada can be reached daily — Air Canada to London to connect with British European Airways which flies London-Helsinki non-stop. And because of Helsinki's proximity to Leningrad, one can begin or end a Finnish visit with a short side-trip to the showplace of the Russian czars.

Of the surprises in store for first-time visitors (among them the unexpected excellence of hotel accommodation and food, even up north of the Arctic Circle), the unique one to Canadians is the manner in which bilingualism is wholly accepted here. Some 90 per cent of the people speak Finnish, the rest Swedish (Finland was part of Sweden for about 600 years until it became a duchy of the Russian empire in the 19th Century).

Maps show principal place names in both languages: Helsinki and Helsingfors, Tampere and Tammerfors, Turku and Abo. Even street signs are in the two languages, as are names of banks and other businesses.

English and French are understood in the larger hotels, department stores and other places of major tourist consurprising how well one can supervising how well one can get along with sign language.

Almost everyone who visits Finland wants to make the trip to Lapland, and with the rapid development of good roads and internal airline service since the war, this has become easy to do. Lapland, by the way, embraces not only northern Finland, but northern Norway and Sweden and even extends into Russia. Swedish Lapland is the largest of these regions.

The tourist may not get to see many reindeer when he goes to Lapland but he will have lots of opportunity to taste reindeer meat: roast reindeer, barbecued reindeer, smoked reindeer, stewed reindeer, reindeer-burgers, even reindeer soup. Many kinds of fish are also popular.

Although Finland is no bargain country, it is not the most expensive either. Hotel rooms cost appreciably less than comparable accommodation in Canada, but rooms are scarce in mid-summer and confirmed reservations are a must. Meals are less expensive than in Canada, as is the cost of internal travel and the miscellaneous expenses travellers run into. Service charges are added to bills and further tipping is not expected. Even taxi drivers here do not expect tips.

ANCIENT SPINNERS

MOSCOW (UPI) — Archeologists in the Soviet Far East unearthed shiny stone plates apparently used as fishing spinners 5,000 years ago, the Soviet news agency Tass said today.

Tass said the archeologists tried the spinners on their own fishing tackle.

"It proved as good as its like today," Tass said.

The spinners — or "spoon bait" — were made of the semi-precious stone nephrite. In ancient times anglers tied their lines to one or two holes on the spinner, and attached a bone hook to the other hole, Tass said.

LATE NIGHT STROLL WITH DOG EXPLAINED

BRENTFORD, England (UPI) — Laborer Robert Saville was cleared of theft charges when he said he only took a basset hound from a police kennel because he felt sorry for it.

Saville said he saw the dog chained up in a police kennel but was denied permission to take it for a walk. He went home but returned in the middle of the night and released the animal. Police caught him a short distance away.

"Taking the dog was not theft," he told the court. "It was an act of kindness — I was just giving it a run out."

Priest to Mark 50th Anniversary

Father Lewis MacLellan of Victoria will celebrate the 50th anniversary of his ordination at an anniversary mass to be held in St. Andrew's Cathedral at 5:15 p.m. Sunday.

He will also be honored by priests of the Victoria diocese at a banquet to be held later at the Empress Hotel.

A graduate from St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia in 1914, he was rector of St. Ninian's Cathedral in Antigonish for 10 years and after coming to Victoria in 1936 was rector of St. Andrew's Cathedral and parish priest in Nanaimo and Esquimalt for many years.

AVOID MISTAKES
in your passport application

Anybody can make mistakes – but when you make one in your passport application it could spoil your whole trip. Because mistakes cause delays you might not have your passport in time.

The Canadian Passport Office suggests:

- Double check your application – be sure you have answered all questions and followed all instructions.
- Apply early – if you do make a mistake there will be time to have it corrected.

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

Passport applications are available from all post offices, travel agencies and airline and steamship companies.

Snouts of U.S. Cars Compared to Battering Rams

By MORTON MINTZ

WASHINGTON (WP) — The government's first auto safety chief has accused car makers of "needless spearing and lacerating" of pedestrians and bicyclists by designing vehicle front-ends like "devices of warfare."

At a senate commerce committee hearing the former official, Dr. William Haddon Jr., showed slides likening the protuding "lips," "nose cones" and "snouts" on 1971 American cars to the pointed and sharp-edged contours of ancient and medieval weapons, including pole-axes and battering rams.

Haddon, a physician and engineer, said that the hazard is especially great for children because their heads are at the level of the "hostile" protruberant metal.

The industry, he argued, has "deliberately ignored" a health principle known to man for thousands of years — that impacting forces do less damage if spread out than if concentrated in a point or sharp edge.

Haddon, after leaving what is now the national Highway Traffic Safety Administration, became president of the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

The institute, which began sponsoring crash testing with 1969 models, is supported by three associations of insurance firms.

The witness disclosed new crash-test data showing that the cost of repairing autos damaged in 5 mile-per-hour crashes is approximately 50 per cent higher for 1971 models than for 1970s. The crash tests were sponsored by the institute at an indoor laboratory.

The average cost of repairing four 4-door 1971 sedans crashed into a fixed barrier was $332. The figure for 1970s was $216. In rear-end crashes, the 1971 average was $329 compared with $219 for 1970.

Haddon emphasized that the speed at which the crashes occurred, 5 mph, is a normal walking pace for many persons. It is also, he said, the speed at which one hits the floor jumping from a height of 10 inches.

Haddon said the increase in repair costs from the 1970 to 1971 models is attributable predominantly to the "designed-in delicateness of the automobiles themselves," not higher prices for labor or parts.

He showed films of these and other crash tests which, he said, demonstrate that auto makers design vehicles to "guarantee huge sales in crash replacement parts" available from no one but themselves.

They do this "knowingly," he said in reply to a question from Sen. Philip A. Hart (D—Mich.), who presided at the hearing.

Hart held the hearing on a bill that he predicts would save car owners "several million dollars a year in repair and insurance bills."

The bill would require the auto industry, starting July 1, 1974, to equip cars with a bumper that completely prevents damage in a 5 mph crash into a solid barrier, and to rate their cars in terms of susceptibility to damage in low-speed collisions.

The bill also would set up a nation-wide system of diagnostic inspection centres for pre-purchase auto testing — possible "the greatest money and frustration saver in the package," Hart says.

Haddon said the design and repair situation had gotten worse since he first presented crash-test results to Hart two years ago, and that "technological remedies remain on the shelf."

Haddon said that when the front of one car was crashed into the rear of an identical model, the front and rear bumpers were at different heights, aggravating the damage. Such cars included Chevrolet Impalas, Ford Galaxies and Volkswagens. He also pointed to film clips

● The "Endura" bumper showing that:
on a Firebird, billed by Pontiac as "energy absorbing," had to be replaced after a 5 mph crash.

● The Skylark, advertised by Buick as having a bumper able to absorb "four times as much force" as 1970 versions, suffered the most costly damage of any car in a 5 mph crash.

● The Mercury Montego suffered $100 damage to the fan and radiator at 5 mph.

● The Ambassador's and the Gremlin's "bumper guards" aggravated crash damage.

● "Snouts" on the Vega, Montego and Firebird inflict massive damage in 10 mph crashes into the sides of other cars.

● The Pinto, in a side crash, suffered a smashed window that caused a shower of shards of glass.

Car Expires After Losing

His pregnant wife Sandra, 21, couldn't wait the 50 miles it took to drive with her husband from their Palm Desert home to Riverside General Hospital. A seven-pound three-ounce son, Ashley, was born in the car on a freeway off-ramp.

Davis, 21, continued on toward the hospital but he missed a freeway turnoff, the brakes failed and he coasted into a junkyard.

He finally summoned help and an ambulance took mother and son to the hospital Thursday.

SOVIET INFLUENCE FEARED

Indian Ocean Navy Considered

By PETER HARVEY
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — The formation of a four-nation naval force to patrol the Indian Ocean is being considered by the governments of the United States, Australia, Britain and New Zealand, according to well-informed sources in London.

The force would be designed to counter growing Soviet naval operations and influence in the area.

The plan was first discussed between Washington, Canberra and London early last year. The New Zealand government also expressed its willingness to support the concept of a permanent allied naval group in the Indian Ocean.

Each navy formed planning groups to study the scheme, and draft working papers have been drawn up. Consideration of the plan was accelerated within the last few months and given more urgent emphasis by Britain's decision to withdraw all troops from the Persian Gulf by the end of this year.

President Nixon has ordered the National Security Council to review the strategic balance in the Indian Ocean, and both Canberra and Wellington have also embarked on similar "reassessments" of the situation following warnings from their navy departments of Soviet build-ups in the area.

In London the ministry of federse said it could make no comment on the plans for the Indian Ocean fleet, but it pointed out that British warships stationed at Singapore frequently take part in exercises with "other SEATo members.

Australia, New Zealand and the United States are all active members of SEATO, the South-East Asia Treaty Organization.

Strongest support for the allied fleet is reportedly coming from the United States, Australian and New Zealand navies. In Washington a few days ago, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, chief of U.S. naval operations, warned that the Soviet Union will become the number one naval force in the area unless it was "checkmated . . . and soon."

Australian and New Zealand naval chiefs have repeatedly told their governments that they share Zumwalt's fears. The U.S. naval commander said the Soviet navy would outflank the West in the Indian Ocean within a decade, as it was now outflanking NATO forces in the Mediterranean.

At a recent conference in Canberra of naval officers from the four nations, details of the proposed fleet's operations, composition and strength were examined. It was apparently agreed that the force could be in operation in the Indian Ocean by early next year.

The planning officers from the three other nations believe Britain's base at Simonstown, South Africa, is ideally suited for inclusion in the proposed Indian Ocean unit. Australian bases in Western Australia and the Northern Territory, on the southern and eastern fringes of the Indian Ocean, would also lend themselves to use by the new force.

Spokesman Chosen

WARSAW (AP) —The Polish government has announced it has appointed its first press spokesman. Sources said he would be allowed to discuss a wide range of topics. PAP, the official government news agency, identified the spokesman as Wlodzimierz Janiurek, former ambassador to Czechoslovakia, and said: "The post will have privileges guaranteeing him effectiveness of work."

"Save-Your-Hair Day" Set For Mon.-Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, March 15 and 16. This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In their announcement they named trichologist Mr. I. Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Sussex Hotel.

EXAMINE YOU FREE

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Edgar. Your only obligation is to yourself —to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

WHO CAN BE HELPED?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? No. We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate — and baldish — by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist.

He's 'tried everything'. So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss — and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today.

FREE SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how baldness can be avoided and hair growth encouraged. The new Harrison method permits you to actually save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For an examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Sussex Hotel Monday or Tuesday between 1:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. for Mr. Edgar's suite number. You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Decline of Church Optimistic Sign

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Some observers of the religion scene have been suggesting that the Church is now staggering toward that special limbo which history maintains for defunct institutions.

There can be no doubting that the Church is deeply troubled. In Europe, including Britain, there has been since the end of the Second World War a movement away from the Church and the development of a widespread couldn't-care-less attitude toward Christian faith.

In North America things have been a little better. For about fifteen years after the war religion with us was, so to speak, a growth industry. We tended to be quite smug about the success of our religious institutions. But after peaking in the middle fifties, North American institutional Christianity began a slow decline — and during the past five or six years the decline has steadily accelerated.

The mood of defeatism in the Church seems to be growing. Many of the clergy are becoming listless and despondent. Many of the laity are quietly dropping out, with many more maintaining only a very casual relationship with the Church.

Has the Church had it? Should we write-off institutional Christianity and try to direct the energies and resources that it uses into other agencies for the benefit of mankind?

I am convinced that the Church is still a long way from defunctness. I am quite optimistic about the Church — despite all the dreary evidence to the contrary and despite my own worries and frustrations as minister of a congregation. Let me give you some of my reasons for optimism:

1. As the Church has been forced by hard circumstance to jettison much of its traditional cargo, it has come to see more clearly what its real purposes are. It senses that in its faith it has resources for dealing with the terrible distresses of man's heart, resources which can help bewildered, frightened, alienated persons to meaningfulness and fulfilment in their lives. And this is leading to new perspectives in preaching and teaching and counselling.

2. There is new recognition that the Church has its reality in mission of compassionate service to the world. But there is also new recognition that the dynamic for this mission is in worship and in the other disciplines of faith. Compassion, after all, is not self-sustaining: it needs constant nurturing. There is new awareness that the Church can live only in a twofold rhythm of assembly and dispersal, assembly for worship and for training in faith, and dispersal for compassionate mission.

3. A new congregationalism is developing. This, of course, has built-in dangers; it can lead to a cozy, soul-combing ingrownness. And it tends to be rather casual, even negligent, with respect to the structures of the Church above the congregational — but that can help smarten-up the higher ecclesiastics. The main thrust of this new congregationalism, however, is an outreaching one, one of sensitivity to the imperative of mission. It may neglect some of the proposals and programs handed down from the Church's higher reaches — but it vigorously involves itself with those which do serve the cause of compassionate mission.

4. This new congregationalism, because it is open-ended and because it sits loosely to the ecclesiastical bureaucracies, leads readily to a creative, local do-it-yourself ecumenism. In most communities now, congregations and the clergy of various denominations are working together in tasks of outreach and mission in quite unprecedented ways, showing that the Church does have an essential unity which is neither obscured nor invalidated by the very real differences among the denominations.

Clergyman Finds Self In Nudie

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rev. Francis L. Filas says he experienced "utter amazement, shock and disbelief" at finding himself a performer in a nudie movie.

Filas, a Loyola University theology professor and an authority on sex education, said he was told by a man in Los Angeles that he was in the film "Hollywood Blue." In disbelief, he went to see for himself.

"About 12½ minutes into it," Filas said Thursday, "after a scene in a nude night club, I came onto the screen.

"I was seated at a desk in my clerical collar and for 50 seconds discussed the misunderstaindings of sex education. When I said, '. . . and the pendulum swings . . .' the scene cut to a closeup of hips swininging."

The hips, he said, belonged to two girls who proceeded to prance nude about the beach.

Then, Filas said, he reappeared on the screen for a few seconds before the scene shifted to a nude couple in a bed.

Filas said the film clip of him was shot several years ago for a Jesuit television series. He said he does not know how the producers of the film obtained the clip.

He said he has filed a $1.1 million damage suit in federal court in Los Angeles.

"I don't allege the movie is obscene or, pornographic," Filas said. "The legal basis for my suit is that it is an invasion of privacy."

JESPERSON
. . . booted from Guinea

Missionary To Speak

A missionary who was run out of the Republic of Guinea in 1967 after working with the Toma people for two years will speak at a conference in Victoria March 16-21.

Jess Jesperson, of Spruce Grove, Alberta, went to West Africa with the Christian and Missionary Alliance in 1965 but was subsequently forced to leave the Republic of Guinea at the insistence of the government.

Not one to give up easily, Jesperson switched his operations across the border to the Ivory Coast where he began evangelizing among the Baoule people.

The Victoria conference is scheduled for 1792 Townley Street and the public is invited to participate.

WORK FOR THE WEEK

Fuchsias and the zonal geraniums can be started indoors by cutting back to lowest bud on each branch. Water well, repot in 10 days. If good light and a cool growing place indoors not available, leave until early April and try outdoors starting.

As potted cyclamens go out of bloom, water less often. When leaves finally quit growing, allow corm to remain dry in the pot for summer. Repot in late August.

Outdoors, weed wherever possible without compacting cultivated soil, but don't expose new growths to late frost. Better to allow withered stems and leaves to remain as protection until during April.

Early sowings outdoors of hardy vegetables can be made where soil is sandy and well drained; it will be warmer than wet soil. Round seeded peas, leeks, early leaf lettuce, spinach, can go in.

In heated porch or greenhouse, sow tomato, limas and soy beans, early cauliflower. Use peat pots or veneer plant bands.

Aussie Author Dies

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Frank Clune, one of the best known Australian authors, has died with his 68th book, one on travel, unfinished. Clune, 77, was admitted to hospital last Saturday and had an emergency stomach operation Monday. His 67 finished books mostly were about travel, Australia and its early history.

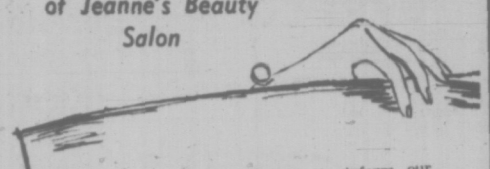
An Open Letter to Patrons of Jeanne's Beauty Salon

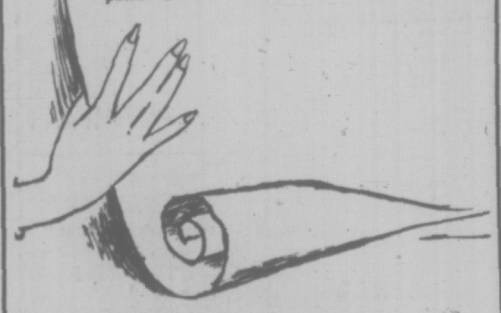


We are very sorry to have to inform our customers that we were forced to terminate our business as of March 6, 1971.

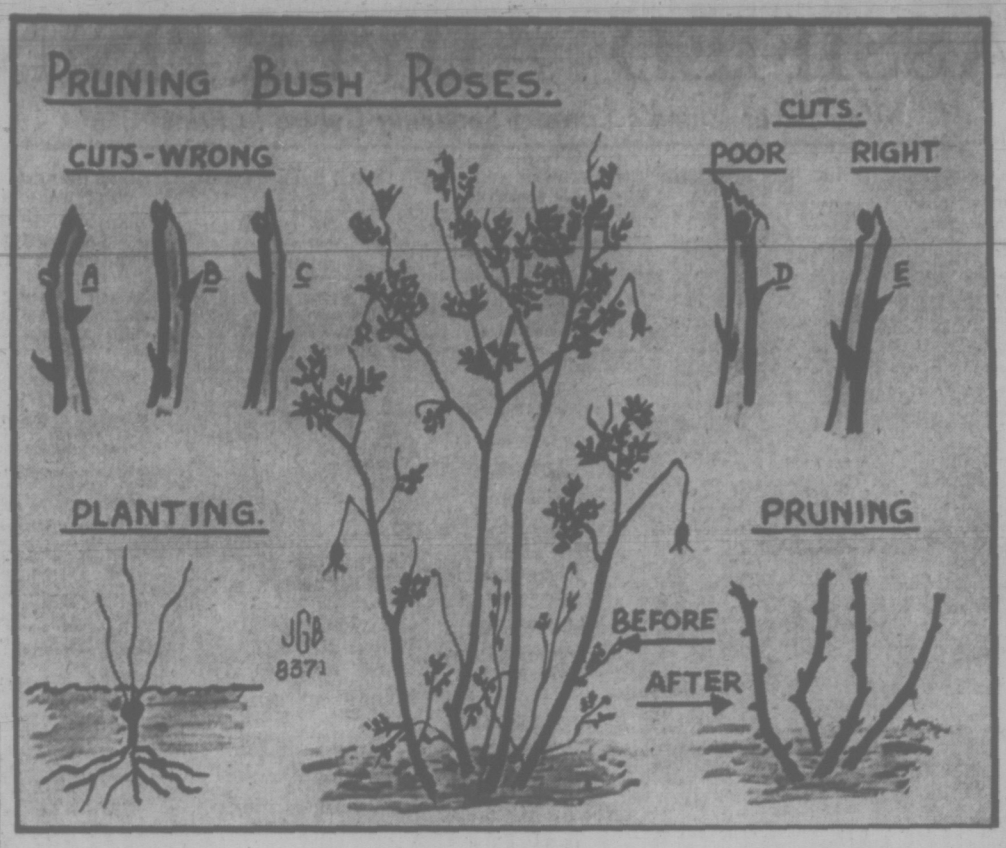
We had planned that our employees would carry on the name and the business, as the new owners in a new location, to accommodate our valued customers.

We had planned that this transition would take place within a year. However, the key employees left us on the above date for a fresh venture. In this new endeavour we wish them well.

We would like to thank our friends for their patronage in the past.



Jeanne and Mack Harris of Jeanne's Beauty Salon



Prudent Pruner Doesn't Chop And He Doesn't Snip Fearfully

By JACK BEASTALL

Some gardeners will lop off a rose as if it were a wild blackberry while others tremble in fear at the thought, and somewhere in between are the gardeners who prune their roses with care and consideration.

One thing is certain: If we wish to have a good display of roses on bushes that are neat and manageable we have to do a certain amount of pruning each spring.

Rose blooms are carried on new shoots yet to be made this spring. Lots of new shoots mean a good display of medium-sized roses; a few new shoots will produce less display but larger and more perfect blooms.

Therefore we temper the pruning to suit our needs: many blooms for a good showing in the garden, few flooms for prizes on the show table.

TIME: Experience has taught us the climate controls the time of pruning. In gardens close to the ocean where further severe frosts are not likely the job is slated for the latter half of March. Only bush roses are pruned, climbers were done last August.

In colder districts and gardens further inland the first half of April is about right. Don't get frantic because a few leaves are starting to unfurl. On this coast the plants are never truly dormant and these precocious leaves are something to ignore.

TOOLS: While waiting for propitious weather we can spend a few hours preparing the tools.

Hand secateurs should be cleaned of all dried sap (a black deposit on the blade) and rust, then sharpened well, maintaining the original shape and the hollow back of the cutting blade. Small pruning saws should be cleaned, set and sharpened. Clean, sharp tools make the work a pleasure and cut the time to a few minutes for each bush.

You will also need a garden cart or wheelbarrow, and at least one strong leather glove for the left hand.

DEMONSTRATIONS: During the waiting period, plan to attend the rose pruning demonstrations that are staged in most communities.

In the Victoria area there will be two more. Sponsored by the Victoria Horticultural Society, the first will be Wednesday at the car park in Beacon Hill Park (between Chinese Bell and the animal pens), and the second on Saturday, March 20, in the Rose Garden at Windsor Park in Oak Bay. Both start promptly at 2 p.m.

Be sure to attend and see how the professional rose growers handle the job. Seeing is worth ten thousand words.

A. Remove all dead wood. If it is a main growth cut it below soil level; if a side growth cut it back flush to the main growth without leaving a spur.

B. Remove all twiggy growths smaller in diameter than a lead pencil; these will never bear good roses. Also remove any larger growths that cross the centre of the bush; the centre must be free for light and air.

C. Prune back the growths that remain to a good growth bud or eye pointing outwards (away from the centre of the bush) at a height of approximately 16 inches above soil level for garden display, or eight to 10 inches for exhibition blooms. That completes the pruning.

Good and bad pruning cuts are shown in the illustration. In detail A, the cut is too far above the bud; the stub will die back and affect the resultant growth. In B, it is too low and will damage the tissues at the base of the bud C is on too great a slant, also exposing bud tissues. D is the result of dirty dull secateurs, and may let disease spores enter before healing. E is about correct, the top one-quarter inch above the bud and the lower end about opposite the centre of the bud on the opposite side of the growth.

As each piece is cut off place it in the garden cart or wheelbarrow. Don't drop it on the ground or you will have a handful of prickles later in the season.

CLEAN UP the bed with a rake, gathering and removing all old fallen leaves because they carry the black-spot spores. Give the first application of complete garden fertilizer to each bush, then apply a two-inch mulch of old manure or compost over the entire surface of the bed, or for two feet around each bush.

PLANTING: New rose bushes should be planted immediately; mid-March we set as the deadline here. Make a large hole with good drainage, and spread the roots without cramping. Trim any broken root ends, and set the base of the stem on a firm mound of soil in the centre of the hole.

Note the swelling, or king, just above the roots in the main stem. This is the budding point and it should always be two inches below soil level. When set above soil level the tissues tend to dry in our rainless summers and the food supply to the upper part is restricted resulting in a poor plant.

WATERING: Start watering before the end of April. Drying of the roots as the water table sinks, plus a crowded centre to the plants, add up to a bad attack of mildew by summer.

Spraying over the foliage with alginure once a month will help control black spot disease. A large rose nursery reports no black spot evident after two years of regular spraying with seaweed extracts.

Tips For The Home Gardener

GALLUP POLL

Most Canadians Like Newspapers

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Across the nation, 79 per cent of the public, give the newspaper they read most often, a favorable rating of doing a good, or a fair job in presenting the news. In the Maritimes, the level is 76 per cent; in Quebec it is 82 per cent; and in Ontario 81 per cent and in the west, 72 per cent.

Appraisals as between a belief that their papers are doing either a good, or a fair job, vary in degree. Readers in Ontario are most inclined to rate it as good (54 per cent) with Quebec and the Maritimes close behind. Quebec has the smallest proportion, regionally, (8 per cent) who consider their newspapers poor.

Westerners are less happy with the news coverage they get. In these provinces, 37 per cent find it good, while almost as many, 35 per cent, think it is fair. The west contains the largest proportion of readers, 22 per cent who consider their newspaper is doing a poor job.

Men are rather more critical of the news coverage in their newspapers, than are women.

In the wake of wide-spread interest in the comments on Canadian newspapers contained in the report made by the Senate Commission on Mass Media, Gallup Poll interviewers put this question to a national sample of adults:

"Now thinking about the newspaper you read most — on the whole, do you feel that it does a good job, or not a good job of presenting the news?"

Just how the nation as a whole feels about the handling of news, is compared, in the table below, with viewpoints in the main regions, and among men as compared to women.

	Good Job	Fair Job	Poor Job	Undecided
Canada	49%	30%	14%	7%
Maritimes	51	25	16	8
Quebec	52	30	8	10
Ontario	54	27	14	5
The West	37	35	22	6
Men	46	32	17	5
Women	51	28	12	9

Weddings

Keepence — Reid

On February 6th, St. Aidan's United Church was the scene of a beautiful candelight service, when a double ring ceremony was solemnized between Wilma Darlene, daughter of Major and Mrs. William Reid, 5050 Cordova Bay Road, Victoria, and Michael Clive Keepence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keepence, 3849 Dubois, Burnaby. Reverend J. Rae Allan officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in an empire styled entrain gown of ligoda crepe with appliques of re-embroidered pearl-tipped alencon lace and full sleeves. Her trailing veil was trimmed with matching lace and held in place with a pearl trimmed headpiece. She carried a bouquet of white gladioli, pink roses and heather. Matron of honour, Mrs. Beverley Vink and the bridesmaids Miss Margaret Reid, sister of the bride, Miss Patricia Keepence, sister of the groom, Miss Lynn Holden and Miss Barbara Scott, wore identical mini dresses of peau d'elegance under full maxi evening coats of pink and silver brocade. They wore silver accessories and carried bouquets of pink gladioli and roses.

The mother of the bride chose a turquoise dress of peau d'ange trimmed with silver and pearl beading, a matching turquoise hat and a corsage of white carnations. The mother of the groom choose a mint green silk and wool sheath dress with matching silver accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Roger Keepence as best man and Messrs. Dennis Eyolfson, Peter Williamson, James Smith and Earl Weisbrod. At the beginning of the ceremony, Mr. Jock Dunlap, accompanied by Mrs. Vera Barclay on the organ, sang the Lord's prayer and during the signing of the register sang "The Impossible Dream".

Hunt — Wilkinson

A candelight double ring ceremony was solemnized on January 30, 1971, at 7:30 p.m., in Esquimalt United Church when Linda Diane Wilkinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wilkinson, Rockheights Avenue, exchanged vows with Mr. William Terrance Hunt, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Douglas Hunt, Ridgeway Place. Reverend R. B. Illsley officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full length A-line gown of lace, with a satin panel in the front. A headpiece of seed pearls held her trailing veil of illusion net. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white freesias. The bride was attended by her sisters, Christine Wilkinson as maid of honor, and Cathy Wilkinson as Junior bridesmaid; Laurie Wilkinson, cousin of the bride, was the other bridesmaid. They wore full length dresses of teal blue and carried white muffs accented with small pink ribbon roses, and matching heart-shaped headpieces. Mr. Maurice Hunt was best man and Messrs. Ted Hooper and Carl Barknett ushered the guests.

A reception followed at the Carlton Club where Mr. Ron Douglas, the bride's uncle from Medicine Hat, Alberta, proposed the toast. A short honeymoon followed. The couple reside in Victoria, B.C.

Kirzinger — Mannix

On February 27, 1971, at 2 p.m., in The Chapel of The Queenswood House of Studies, guests witnessed the exchange of marriage vows between Julie Margaret, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Mannix, and Larry R. Kirzinger, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred J. Kirzinger. Reverend P. Ratchford officiated at the ceremony assisted by Reverend E. W. MacQuarrie. During the service, readings were given by several members of the wedding party.

The bride chose a floor-length gown of white georgette fashioned with long full sleeves and empire waistline accented with pearls, and a lacy mohair picture hat sashed with georgette. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow and white rosebuds. Maid of Honour, Miss Cecily Mosedale, in aqua, and bridesmaid Miss Elizabeth Mannix, sister of the bride in deep pink, wore dresses of georgette styled similarly to the bride's and mohair picture hats trimmed with tulle and velvet to match their dresses. They carried colonial bouquets of carnations and rosebuds in pink, white and aqua.

Mr. Daniel Parker was best man and brothers of the bride and groom, Messr. Leonard and Matthew Mannix and David and Ronald Kirzinger were ushers.

The reception was held at the Olde England Inn, where Mr. Trevor Reading proposed the toast to the young couple.

Honoured guests at the wedding were the bride's grandmothers Mrs. L. N. Mannix and Mrs. William Farquhar, and the groom's grandmother Mrs. M. Kirzinger from Bruno, Sask.

Out of town guests were Mrs. R. Reaser, Cudworth, Sask., Mr. and Mrs. A. Mendes, Mr. and Mrs. F. Barry, Mr. V. Campbell, Miss Margaret Kolla, all of Vancouver, and Prof. David J. Rose of Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

Watson — Scougal

A double ring ceremony was solemnized on February 27th, 1971 at 3:30 p.m. in The Church of St. Andrew (Naden) when Heather Penelope, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon J. Scougal of West Vancouver, exchanged vows with William Morton Bruce, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Watson of Ranna, Alberta.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and attended by her sister Mrs. G. Young. Best man was Mr. James Bowlby.

Horsman — Brand

Mrs. Shirley Brand happily announces the marriage of her eldest daughter, Beverly Jean, to Mr. Arthur James Horsman, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Horsman. Reverend Morris officiated at a simple ceremony which took place at the home of the bride's mother on Friday, March 12.

The bride and groom were costumes in white, embroidered by the bride and her mother. Attending the couple were Mr. Peter Jackson and Miss Lissa Brand.

The couple will reside in Victoria.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

SIMS — Suddenly on March 12, 1971, Mr. Robert Sims, aged 50 years, of 2661 Florence Lake Rd., a resident here since 1946. He leaves his loving wife, Ruth; 2 daughters, Kathryn and Dianne, at home; his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sims of Fruitvale, B.C.; one brother, James, Montrose, B.C., and 2 sisters, Mrs. N. (Mildred) Horner and Mrs. J. (Elizabeth) Fair, of Prince George. He was a member of Armstrong Branch, Royal Canadian Legion and was, for 16 years, associated with Universal Sheet Metal.

Funeral service in McCall Bros. FLORAL CHAPEL, Johnson and Vancouver Sts., on Wednesday, March 17, at 10:15 a.m., with the Rev. Dr. F. E. H. James officiating. Interment at Hatley Memorial Gardens.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to relatives, friends and neighbors who sent expressions of sympathy, floral tributes and contributions to the Heart Fund; also special thanks to Dr. R. Wride and the Victoria Police Department for assistance rendered at the passing of our dear husband and father—Mrs. F. R. Woodrow, Brian and Garth.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MORTON—In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, William Morton, who passed away March 13, 1967.

Like falling leaves the years slip by,
But memories of our loved ones never die.

—Always remembered and sadly missed by his loving daughter Evelyn, son-in-law Allen and grandchildren Mary and Bob.

SEARS MEETS ROEBUCK

A Classified Ad played a role in the Sears-Roebuck story—this ad appeared in The Chicago Daily News in 1887—

"WANTED — WATCHMAKER with references who can furnish tools. State age, experience, salary. — R. W. Sears, Jeweller."

It was Alvan C. Roebuck who answered and got the job selling watches, jewelry, and mailing them, which developed into the world's greatest merchandising operation.

Dinghy Sails Dot Elk Lake

Blue-sailed enterprises and jaunty sabots dot the waters of Elk Lake each Sunday morning as dinghy sailing classes for members of Elk Lake sailing association get under way.

Eric Gravenor is fleet captain this year and races are open to any boat up to 18 feet in length.

"The emphasis is on sailing for fun," says secretary Mrs. P. J. Hemphill who adds that novices include an elderly retired man member as well as several eight-year-old children. Instruction is casual, delivered by passing boats and a rescue craft is always on hand. Life jackets are mandatory.

Saanich municipality sponsored a regatta on Elk Lake two years ago and this event will be taken over by E.L.S.A. on April 11.

Work has progressed during the winter on a strip of shoreline donated for club use of Saanich land, under the leadership of Hans Waelti, the picnic and race marshalling area is now cleared.

Before the Judge

Mrs. Sheila Merriman, 39, of 3444 Wascana, was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for three months after pleading guilty in traffic court Friday to a charge of impaired driving Feb. 20 in Esquimalt.

Mrs. Irene Wachter, 33, of 2260 Cadboro Bay, who pleaded guilty to a charge of driving Feb. 20 with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent, was fined $150 and given a partial three-month driving ban.

Liquor Probe: $89,287

The B.C. liquor commission inquiry two years ago cost $89,287.

The total appeared in answers to questions filed in the legislature by Provincial Secretary Wesley Black.

The three-men commission held public hearings throughout the province in 1969 while examining B.C. liquor laws and collecting opinions on them.

Most of the commission's subsequent recommendations have not been implemented. Among other things, it suggested a three-man rather than the current one-man liquor control board and recommended breaking the hotel monopoly on beer sales.

Saanich Miss Will Decorate May 24 Parade

A Miss Centennial Pageant will be staged in Central Saanich this spring and the winner, with her two princesses, will ride in the Victoria May 24 parade.

Anna Allen, convener of the pageant, says entry forms must be in by March 20. Participants between the ages of 17 and 21 will be judged on intelligence, poise, personality, beauty and congeniality.

Contestants will model in a fashion show and converse with Mayor Archibald Galbraith and Council of Central Saanich at an invitational tea on May 2.

Judging will take place before May 24.

Entry forms are available at Saanich Peninsula Credit Union, the Royal Bank and the Pharmacy at Brentwood, as well as at Mrs. Allen's store. For information, phone 652-3143.

HISTORIC TOWER

PTA Sets Objectives

Saanich School Board will take an initial step towards establishment of educational objectives at its meeting with parents of peninsula elementary schools on Monday night in Sidney elementary.

Sponsored by the Sidney Parent-Teacher Association, the meeting will feature a panel discussion led by trustees Harry Tobin, Charles McNeill, Trevor Davis and Gordon Ewan on the topic "future plans for education and budgetary policies."

Trustee McNeill said this week "we are going to pick everybody's brains" to establish educational objectives and another trustee, Zachary Hamilton commented "we (the board) have been too inclined to sit in an ivory tower. We need a broader spectrum.")

The PTA meeting is the first in a series planned by trustees to talk with business leaders, students and teachers.

A WOMAN TOO MANY FOR THIS MINISTER

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — A 13-member jury of churchmen stripped the Rev. William A. Schafer of his credentials as a Methodist minister Friday because his life style included living with his wife, two children and a mistress.

Schafer, former pastor in Laredo and a minister for 10 years, said he was in love with both women and his wife didn't mind.

The jury of church officials found him guilty of "immorality, disobedience of church law and unministerial conduct."

Bad Cheques Net 3 Years

Donald Marlow Champion, 31, of Victoria, was sentenced to three years in jail after pleading guilty in County Court Friday to five counts of false pretences involving more than $50 and three counts under $50.

He was sentenced by Judge M. L. Drake.

Champion was accused of obtaining with worthless cheques goods totalling $1,826 in volue at six stores in Victoria and two in Saanich. ood's he received included stereo equipment, two tires, camera equipment, a razor, a toaster and a percolator.

At the same time that Champion was sentenced, Prosecutor Brian Smith entered a stay of proceedings on two charges containing four counts of possession of stolen or unlawful items.

Decision to Wreck Ivy Tower Made at No-Quorum Meeting

The decision to tear down the historic, ivy-covered tower of Ashnola at the Gorge Road Hospital was taken at a meeting Friday of the hospital board when there were only five members out of 12 present — less than a quorum.

The meeting was called by hospital administrator W. E. Morrison Friday afternoon, after he became aware of last-ditch attempts to save the tower.

Wrecking cables were put around it Friday and Morrison said "we would have had it down by now," except for the opposition.

After the hastily-called meeting, he said he will probably instruct wreckers to demolish the tower on Monday.

A city alderman, two historians and several architects — including the one directing the hospital extension project — say the onion-domed red-brick tower should be saved at least long enough to find out if government funds are available for its maintenance.

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, chairman of the Capital District Regional Board which oversees the Hospital, today added his voice to the call for preservation of the tower if feasible.

"If it were saved and you could see it in a setting, with landscaping, it would likely look quite attractive," he said.

It will take strong public pressure, however, because Curtis said the regional board has no power to overrule the hospital board.

Asked whether the hospital board's decision could be ruled invalid because of lack of a quorum, Curtis said: "I don't want to comment on the legality or illegality" of the manoeuvre.

Curtis was not invited to the board meeting.

He said the regional board does not have the statutory authority to save historic landmarks.

BACKERS LISTED

Others who said the tower should be saved if possible: Ald. Peter Pollen, provincial librarian Willard Ireland, James K. Nesbitt, head of the Victoria Historical Society, architect Peter Cotton, who directed the restoration of Craigflower Manor House and Emily Carr's birthplace, architect Roger Smeeth — and Brian Padden architect of the hospital extension.

Their suggestion came after it was learned that plans for the hospital extension show that the tower, an onion-domed three-storey structure, could be left standing without interfering with car-parking, traffic flow or operation of the hospital.

Padden said the only immediate cost of saving the tower would be a reduction in the amount of money the wreckers, OK Paving Ltd., pay the hospital for the bricks and materials OK salvages from the house. He did not think this would be a very large sum.

"Architects of modern projects seems determined to get rid of everything old," Nesbitt said. "Where we can combine the new with a bit of the old; it's a perfect stuation."

Architect Peter Cotton, who directed the restoration of Craigflower Manor House and Emily Carr's birth-place on Government, said "the least they (the hospital board) could do is ldave the tower standing, as a gesture of humility for their stupidity in tearing the house down."

He suggested a public subscription to pay the revenue the hospital would lose from the salvagers.

Architect Roger Smeeth said it would be "great" to save the tower. "It doesn't seem to interfere at all with the proposed operation of the hospital.

"It would be no sweat off our backs to preserve it. It's an ideal situation."

Architect Chuck Charlesworth, former president of the Historical Building Foundation of Greater Victoria, said he believes the mortar on the tower is in fairly poor shape but that it could probably be re-mortared, or reinforced with concrete.

Provincial librarian Willard Ireland said the tower is "one of the many things disappearing in the city because in the original planning stage, no thought is given to retaining historically or architecturally significant structures."

He said the Ashnola tower was worth saving on both grounds — historic and architectural.

Powerful Leeds Manage Only Tie

LONDON (CP) — Leeds United, beset by injuries, was held to a 1-1 draw today by Blackpool, last-place team in the English League's First Division.

The tie was a setback for Leeds in its bid to clinch the English soccer title. Arsenal, with a 2-0 victory over Crystal Palace, cut Leeds' lead to six points.

Leeds has 52 points from 33 games and Arsenal 46 from 31 contests.

John Craven scored for Blackpool in the 41st minute and Peter Lorimer got an equalizing goal in the second half.

Crystal Palace dominated its game against Arsenal for 27 minutes before George Graham got a surprise goal for Arsenal. Then John Uammels, who hadn't scored a goal all season, came in as a substitute and made it 2-0 in the final minute.

SCORES 26th GOAL

Martin Chivers scored his 26th goal of the season to give Tottenham Hotspur a hard-fought 2-1 victory over Chelsea. A crowd of 50,000 watched the all-London thriller at White Hart Lane Stadium.

After a scoreless first half, Keith Weller, a former Tottenham player, sent Chelsea into the lead in the 48th minute. Martin Peters tied the score in the 69th minute and with 10 minutes to go Chivers got the winning goal.

THERE ARE FOUR REASONS why Actall Construction Co. Ltd., Kamloops, owns this 2-yd. Caterpillar 930 Wheel Loader. It is fast and can load in tight places. It stands up well. Like other Cat equipment, it has high trade-in value. And Actall gets good parts and service support from Finning in Kamloops. Speed and maneuverability comes from the responsive 100 hp Cat diesel, articulated steering, and single lever full power shift. High availability comes from proven reliability and long service life. Lower repair and downtime costs and lower actual depreciation mean you get more at trade-in time. Parts and service support from your local Finning store is the best in the industry. You can get a repair and maintenance program tailored to the way you want it and to whatever degree you want it. Finning will even take over the entire servicing responsibility and quote you a guaranteed cost. So if you want performance and profit in a 1¾ to 2-yd. wheel loader, own a 930. See your sales representative from Finning, your Caterpillar Dealer.

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have been trying to do everything I can to help my dog's eye condition heal. I was wondering if there are any vitamins which could help his eye heal besides vitamin C and vitamin A.—J.D.

DEAR J.D.: Vitamin A and C are the two most important "eye" vitamins. However, two of the B-complex vitamins, riboflavin and niacin are also very important in the healing processes of many ulcerative conditions of the eye. Check with the doctor on these and for vitamin dosage recommendations.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Splendor, our cat, has been having a terrible time with colds and things this winter. She just got over something called feline pneumonitis about a month ago and now she's back again with about the same things except this time she isn't eating at all. The doctor calls this one "flu." Is that the same as pneumonitis?—F.R.

DEAR F.R.: Essentially there are four main categories of respiratory viral diseases. These include pneumonitis, influenza, infectious conjunctivitis and Rhinotracheitis. The pneumonitis and the influenza ARE different diseases. Splendor would have gained no resistance from the bout with pneumonitis and would have been as susceptible as any other cat to an onslaught of feline influenza. The infectious conjuctivitis is the longest lasting of this group. This virus group may produce symptoms for as long as three months. Primarily the eyes are involved though the nose and sinuses are also infected. Feline Rhino-tracheitis is the most deadly of the group. Most cats cannot survive an attack of Rhino-tracheitis.

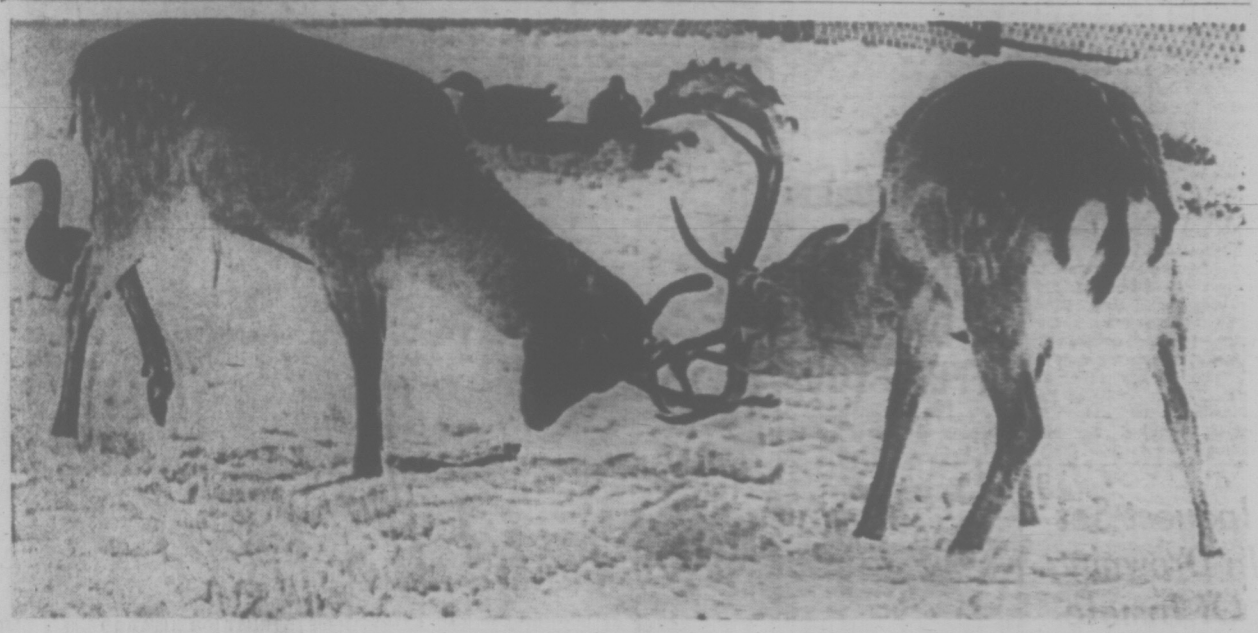
FOR MURDER OF LAPORTE

Rose Guilty, Gets Life Term



SPRING FEVER CONQUERS ALL, even snowy weather, as witness these bucks locking horns in a test battle Friday in Toronto's High Park. There was a hint of spring in the air with bright sunshine and temperatures in the 30s coming as welcome relief after a series of snowstorms which hit Ontario and Quebec this winter. (CP Wirephoto)

Could Be Free In 10 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose was sentenced to life imprisonment today after being found guilty by a Court of Queen's Bench jury of the non-capital murder of Pierre Laporte.

The jury, which began deliberations briefly Friday, entered its verdict soon after resumption of court proceedings today, winding up the seven-week trial.

Rose, 27, would become eligible for parole after serving 10 years of his life term.

Rose is the first of four persons to be tried in the kidnapping of the Quebec labor minister last Oct. 10 and his strangulation death a week later.

The seven-week trail just concluded dealt with the non-capital murder charge only.

TAKES VERDICT CALMLY

The other three — Jacques Rose, 23, Paul's brother, Francis Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19 — are to face trail on similar charges at a later date.

Rose took the verdict calmly, as though he expected it.

"Vive le Quebec libre, vive le peuple Quebecois, nous vaincrons."

In translation Rose's comments in Englis were: "Long live free Quebec, long live the Quebec people, we shall win."

When the 12-man jury filed into Court of Queen's Bench shortly after 10 a.m. today, Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols asked:

"Are you ready to continue your deliberations?"

TRIAL BEGAN JAN. 25

The jury foreman said: "We have reached a verdict."

The decision came after the foreman Friday had asked that deliberations be postponed until today because jurors were too tired to continue. That request came after the jury met for 25 minutes Friday.

After pronouncing the life sentence, Mr. Justice Nichols then sentenced Rose to one month for contempt of court.

Canadian Oil Corporation Seen Following Home Deal

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A multi-billion-dollar Canadian government international oil corporation could develop out of the planned acquisition of Home Oil, Ltd. by the federal government, it was learned here today.

Ottawa hopes to block a United States takeover of control of Home Oil of Calgary by buying control in the company, Energy Minister J. J. Greene has disclosed in the Commons. Cost to the government of this purchase could run to $26,000,000 initially.

Out of this development may materialize the huge new Canadian government-controlled company. It would encompass Home Oil's production, exploration and pipeline assets, the government's interests in Panarctic oils, the refining capabilities of Polymer Corporation and elements of Eldorado Nuclear Limited.

The two federal Crown corporations, Polymer and Eldorado, are being consulted as the Canadian government proceeds with its negotiations to buy controlling interest of Home Oil. The directors of Panarctic are also being kept informed of the negotiations.

The bold new concept was presented to cabinet by Greene and despite some opposition he has apparently convinced the majority of the cabinet that this is the way to proceed. Sources close to cabinet said Saturday that the deal is now too far advanced to be stopped.

The Canada Development Corporation, to be established by legislation before Parliament, will participate in the formation of the giant Canadian oil company. It would act as the lynch-pin to combine elements of Crown corporations, Home Oil and the government's interests in Panarctic oils.

The bill creating the CDC is expected to be passed by Parliament this spring.

Leading the negotiations for the government in the purchase of Home Oil is Jack Austin, deputy minister of energy, mines and resources. He is conducting the talks with R. A. Brown Jr., president of Home Oil. He began negotiation to prevent the sale of Home Oil to Ashland Oil of Kentucky as early as June last year.

YOUNG SOLDIERS SENT HOME

Times News Services

BELFAST — Britain will withdraw about 170 troops under the age of 18 from Northern Ireland after the killing of three young off-duty soldiers this week.

The order, to take effect as soon as possible, was announced Friday night by Defence Minister Lord Carrington. One of the three murdered soldiers was only 17, a second, his brother, 18, and a third 23.

One report said the three were enticed from a saloon by girls working for the Irish Republican Army and were ambushed.

Police found their inquiries balked to a large extend by the fear of reprisals against informers instilled over the years into many sections of the population.

Tensions were high in Northern Ireland this week with fears of violence by Protestants seeking revenge against Roman Catholic districts. Leave was cancelled for most of the 8,000 British soldiers on peacekeeping operations here as the hunt for the murderers continued.

Indira, Marxists Locked in Battle

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party was locked in a close race today with the militant Marxist Communist party for control of the state assembly in violence-ridden West Bengal.

In the national parliamentary elections, Mrs. Gandhi moved toward a possible two-thirds majority that would enable her to pass constitutional amendments with ease. She has promised India's poor drastic economic and social reform.

With the results from 183 of 277 constituencies counted in West Bengal, the Congress party had won 73 seats and the Marxists 70. The remaining 40 seats already decided were shared among 14 parties that will play a major role if a coalition government is formed in the state.

Mrs. Gandhi's party made a strong showing in Calcutta and in the northern part of the state, winning 32 seats more than it held after the last general election.

EXTENDS INFLUENCE

But the Marxists swept all but one of 23 seats in agricultural and industrial areas of Burdwan district, scene of some of the worst violence. The Marxist provincial leader, who is in jail charged with murder, retained his assembly seat.

The Marxist hold in rural areas long had been considered weak but its success in Burdwan showed the party has been able to extend its influence.

Pipeline Inevitable, Chretien Tells House

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Friday an Arctic pipeline is inevitable and that he will meet oil company executives within two weeks to lay down the conditions by which the line could be built through the Mackenzie Valley.

He and Energy Minister J. J. Greene will meet the presidents of the seven firms developing oil reserves on Alaska's north slope at Prudhoe Bay.

The Mackenzie Valley pipeline is the only alternative to the trans-Alaska pipeline, which would supply giant supertankers running from Valdez, Alaska, down the British Columbia coast to refineries in Washington.

Mr. Greene told the Commons the tanker route was "fraught with potential danger" from oil spills, and reiterated the government's preference for the Mackenzie Valley line.

But Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said the tanker route is inevitable. The Mackenzie line would also be likely as a secondary route.

U.S. PRESSED

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said the U.S. government is under strong domestic and international pressures to build the Alaska pipeline.

Turk Power Scramble On

ANKARA (Reuter) — President Cevdet Sunay called an emergency meeting of the Senate today as moves got under way to find a new Turkish government to replace that of Suleyman Demirel, forced out of power by army threats Friday.

After meeting the 183-member Senate, the 70-year-old president, who plans to address the country Sunday, arranged to talk with Gen. Memduh Tagmac, chief of the general staff.

The general was the man behind the armed forces threat Friday to take over the country if Demirel did not resign.

BANK ROBBERS USE HOSTAGE

Girl Safe After Kidnap

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Six-year-old Amy Larson was reunited with her family Friday night after being abducted from her home in the morning and spending six hours bound up in the back of a van truck.

About all that she could say was that she was very comfortable," said Allen G. Larson, who said his daughter had been examined by doctors and was in fine shape.

Amy was abducted shortly before the bank her father manages was robbed. A man had phoned Larson and said Amy and her mother were being held as hostages.

J. Earl Milnes, agent in charge of the Seattle FBI office, said she was found bound and gagged in the truck in a supermarket parking lot in Juanita a few miles north of here. Both towns are Seattle suburbs.

AMY
happy to be home

"The men didn't abuse her," Larson said. "She said she was cold and hungry.

"The men gave her a candy bar to eat during the day."

Two men went to the Larson home about 10:30 Friday morning and were admitted by Amy while her mother, Corrine Larson, was in another room, the King County public safety department said.

They tied Mrs. Larson up and left, police said, apparently taking the family's 1956 station wagon as well as a white van truck the men were believed to have arrived in.

The station wagon, belonging to the Larsons, was found a few blocks from the bank shortly after the robbery. Larson's wife was freed by police and officers said she apparently was unharmed, although she was described as "extremely upset."

OPERATION IN LAOS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese field officers said today that the major portion of the operation in Laos will end in about two weeks but that some troops will remain at border posts.

South Vietnamese troops that were pulled back from the key Ho Chi Minh Trail village of Sepone Friday were nearing the South Vietnam border today.

Dance Studio Reeling:

Unhappy Customers Are Stepping Forward As Management Is Entangled in Squabbles

Why not? Parties are fun. People are fun. And dancing is fun. Put all three together . . . and you have the famous Arthur Murray "Party Time" Dance Clubs where dance parties and socials are planned for you once a week.

Sometimes the parties are held in the studios, sometimes on the town, sometimes at an outing. It's always something new, with new people to meet, and new things to do.

—From the "Murray-Go-Round" published by Arthur Murray Inc.

By DOUG MacRAE

Item: A nurse with a net income of $3,800 has paid, over an eight-month period $1,266 of it in fees to a dance studio, which she described as "a type of lonely hearts club where participants are virtually hypnotized into taking more lessons."

Item: A retired couple, comfortably fixed, have spent $12,758 in dance lessons and social extras in less than two years. They blame themselves for being "foolish enough to be brainwashed."

Item: A widow, in her mid-60s, has had her apartment mail box broken open and a cheque for $83 stolen. She blames an instructor at the dance studio she attends.

Item: A delicate 74-year-old, twice a widow, has paid more than $8,000 to a dance studio over an 18-month period. She admits she is getting "exceptionally poor value" for her money, but keeps going back for lessons.

There are three operations of the type often criticized in the city: Elsie's Studio of Ballroom Dancing, 536 Broughton; Fiesta Dance Club, operated by the Fred Astaire chain, at 723 Fort; and the Arthur Murray studio, 715 Yates.

Elsie's, established 11 years ago, has been free of complaints. The firm doesn't sign students to contracts and has a clean record at the Better Business Bureau.

Fiesta and Arthur Murray are targets of a fat file of BBB complaints.

The Arthur Murray studio, a franchised member of the world's largeset chain is in turmoil at the moment, and the resultant hirings, firings and student bitterness have afforded a rare opportunity to peer into the workings of dance studio operations.

Trouble at the studio came to a dead last week, but it had been brewing a long time.

The business had been run from 1956 to 1968 by Gisele Van, as manager and then as franchised owner. There were no BBB complaints in that period; in fact, the firm was a member of the Better Business Bureau.

The studio was bought from her by Frederic Reuther, of Denver, franchised owner of nine studios in western Canada and the United States, and subsequently sold to John Follgard in 1969.

Follgard left under a cloud in June, 1970. Since then the operation has seen a succession of managers operating under Reuther, who has ruled in absentia, the latest being of Gilbert Pierce who came from Seattle in February.

* * *

Pierce was fired by Reuther last week in a bitter dispute. Reuther now says he is going to run the club personally, blames studio troubles on Follgard, and says the rancor of students has been fomented by Pierce.

Pierce, 29, says he was trying to give students value for their money but that Reuther objected to his spending of company funds on parties for the students.

In the course of the internal troubles, people who would never consider speaking out publicly, have come forward. This is unusual in that a dance studio's greatest appeal is to shy people, often painfully shy, who hope to be brought out of themselves by learning to dance well in an atmosphere which also promises an opportunity for continuing social contact.

Other students are elderly or retired, with time on their hands. They don't want their children or friends to know they have turned to dance lessons for companionship or because they were insecure, and they are most reluctant to talk with anyone exept fellow students.

But this week they did talk, long and loud, although they asked that their names not be used. Any student names given here will be fictitious.

Their circumstances, their experiences with studios, their complaints and the money they have spent, are facts.

Archie Clagg is retarded. In his 30s, he lives with his parents and draws welfare. In response to a telephone solicitation, he visited the Arthur Murray studio for a free lesson.

Asked to sign a contract for $200 in more lessons, he wrote a cheque for $150 — all his parents allowed him to have in the bank. His parents were stirred to action and lodged a colplaint with the Better Business Bureau when he got into a bitter argument with them over permission to turn his welfare cheque over to the studio to make up the balance of the contract.

Nancy Primrose, 28, is a professional woman, fairly well-paid. She lives in a spartan apartment; one of the reasons is that she has paid $7,708 for dance lessons and social extras over 18 months.

She is not unattractive, but extremely shy. She has stopped going regularly to Arthur Murray studio because of what was described to her as a foul-up in records. The result of the foul-up was that 100 hours of instruction, for which she paid $2,500, has disappeared.

Miss Primrose, afraid that her colleagues might twig to her love of the dance, has decided to let the matter drop.

Mrs. Pike, the "Twinkletoes" mentioned earlier, is perhaps the classic example of the elderly dance fans who fill the studio coffers to overflowing.

At 74, she has had a full but tough life. She lost her first husband shortly after they were married, and didn't wed again until 1947. Her second husband died in 1957.

She has some income and doesn't live expensively. Dancing is her only hobby.

She lives in a small, pink bungalow in a middle-class neighborhood. Her living room is stuffed with small china ornaments, a violet tea set and a desk pen engraved "To a loving, dancing grandmother."

A small, white-haired, sprightly woman, she talked this week of her two-year connection with Arthur Murray.

"There has been no security all for the past few months. Somethimes I'd go down for my lesson and I'd be the only one there.

"I would sit there for half an hour, then a teacher would tell me, 'Sorry, Mrs. Pike, I've got a new pupil.'

"He would say his orders are to dance with the new pupils first. But is that fair to us older pupils? We wait while they dance?

"He tells, me, 'I've got my orders.'

"But suppose I've got an appointment to meet someone for tea? (As it happens I didn't really have an appointment.)

"He says, 'I've got my orders.'

"The thing is, I've paid in advance. They already have my money. But I don't get angry. All the impatience in the world won't make things better.

"I want any lessons I can get, and fast. What happens if the place goes bankrupt?"

It's difficult for Mrs. Pike to get to the studio. She has bronchial trouble, and will make the expedition only when a friend or neighbor will drop her at the studio and pick her up again.

"I've got wonderful neighbors, very discreet, and I make it up to them with little gifts, you see.

"But it's hardly worth it now. I like to go up there for an hour's enjoyment; all I've been getting lately is worry."

The letter expressed "unhappy and most dissatisfied feelings ... but let it be thoroughly understood that we place all blame upon owner management and not upon staff.

"We have had some qualified teachers and managers who were either disposed of or forced to leave through failure to receive their pay cheques."

Among a dozen complaints litsted:

- Hobby club benefits purchased under previous ownership were ignored (The Hobby Club is supposed to provide extra social functions.)
- Subsequent club privileges purchased have not been honored fully.
- Such things as Dance-o-Ramas and Festivals paid for have been completely dropped, so time, training and money wasted.
- One Festival disallowed for failure to pay Arthur Murray Inc. entrance fee.
- Prizes from previous festivals never received.
- No attempt made for progress. Students kept endlessly on each program without any opportunity to earn certification or acknowledgement of progress.
- One student in desperation paid for hotel and air expenses to Calgary to receive a Bronze Test (an intermediate signpost of development in dance studies).

The letter had kind words for Pierce in his three-week tour as manager. And Pierce has kind words for Theiss, whom he describes as an honest man not fully aware of what is going on in Victoria.

Theiss could not be contacted for comment. Inquiries were channelled to the firm's attorney in Coral Gables, who said Arthur Murray Inc. was behind Reuther in the dispute, but would be "watching the franchise closely."

While the internecine squabble continues, the students complain — albeit cautiously.

Miss Clare Parker, like others afraid her friends and family would ridicule her dance studio activity, always paid for her lessons one at a time, in cash, because she didn't want a record in the form of cheques in circulation.

When she attempted to pay for her 14th lesson with a $20 bill, she was told by her instructor that if she came back with another one of "these things" he would throw it back at her. He said he wanted her to sign a contract.

* * *

Is there any protection in law for the Victoria student who feels he or she may not be getting a fair deal? Very little, says the Better Business Bureau, but its worth a try.

Recent changes in both federal and B.C. law, designed to protect consumers involved in credit buying, may be helpful.

In the past, promissory notes have been collectable by the finance company which buys them from the retailer — in this case this would be the studio — and the money has been collectable whether the retailer lived up to the contract or not.

Not so any more. If the courts agree that you have not been given what you agreed to pay for, you no longer are obliged to pay.

The flaw in the law is that it still is your responsibility to take the court action. The government won't do it for you.

But it still can be a potent weapon. Dance studios are not fond of the idea of facing a complaint in court, and rarely will initiate court action themselves to collect on a contract.

The studios jealously guard any tenuous good public image they may have, and dislike the idea of courtroom glare and publicity.

There are more than 30,000 active students in dance studios around the world. Organized and watchful, they could guarantee their money buys what it is supposed to.

There are people who want the camaraderie of a well-run studio, the enjoyment they get from improving their dance-floor performance, or something — anything — to fill a life that has become empty.

Shouldn't they be allowed the honest luxury of these small things?

Her granddaughter calls her 'Twinkletoes' but the price has been $8,000 in 18 months

'I want any lessons I can get, and fast. What happens if the place goes bankrupt?'

The greatest appeal is to shy people who are seeking continuing social contact

Second 'How-Not-To' Lesson

Two projects by psychology students at the University of Victoria suggest they — and their teachers — have something to learn about the psychology of dealing with businessmen.

Bill Tindall, manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau, said today local businessmen have been complaining about a project which had students interviewing employers on how they select employees.

"The businessmen wondered why the questions didn't seem to be related to the topic and were told after the interview that the students were really doing a paper on prejudices toward hiring Indians.

"They (the businessmen) were completely disenchanted with the apparent subterfuge that was used to gain the interviews," said Tindall.

This situation comes to light while repercussions of another project last month, involving phoney letters of complaint sent to businesses by psychology students, are still being felt, he added.

But the second case is worse than the first because the students involved in the interviewing were studying under Dr. Alexander Milton, chairman of the university's psychology department, so the experiment had official blessing, said Tindall.

The phoney complaint letters, sent out last month by students of psychology professor Lorne Rosenblood, were part of a project to determine the best way of obtaining favorable results when writing letters of complaint.

Some of the letters included phrases like "profiteers like you," "shoddy merchandise" and "lying about it (quality) in your advertising."

Letters of explanation were later sent to at least some of the firms.

Tindall said it was first thought just local companies had been involved "but now we realize it is across Canada and the United States.

"We've had references to this from Montreal, Vancouver and down in the United States.

"Reference has been made to us that in view of the expenses incurred because of the complaints, one or two companies are considering legal action against the students, the professor or the university."

Tindall said at least two companies incurred "a great deal of expense" dissembling the machinery they produce to try and find the source of the problem after they had received several letters of complaint.

In another case, a Vancouver distributor was contacted by an American firm which received a complaint. The distributor was concerned about the impact on numerous other products it handles.

Tindall quoted a letter sent to Rosenblood by the national sales manager of a firm involved:

"Naturally when we receive three letters of complaint, we assume there might have been a problem and no efforts were spared to uncover the source."

The sales manager wrote that "a great deal of time, effort and expense on the part of myself and other personnel in our laboratory" were involved.

Struck Hospital Ordered To Shut Off Furnace

The war of attrition between Sandringham Private Hospital and picketers took an unexpected turn Friday evening when Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons ordered the hospital's faulty oil furnace shut off.

But the furnace was repaired and declared operational around 2 a.m. today, Sandringham administrator Mrs. Margaret Reynolds said today.

The two men who presumably carried out the repairs got through the picket line by saying they were reporters, said Jack Groves, president of the Victoria Labor Council which has organized picketing at the hospital.

Groves said it was the second time the furnace had broken down since the strike began.

Mrs. Reynolds said all kinds of electric heaters were brought into the hospital when it was thought there would be no heat for several hours or days. She said things now are back to normal.

She was asked how long the hospital's fuel supply would last, since pickets have sealed the hospital off to any further fuel deliveries.

"I think that's something I can't divulge because I have my people to protect," she said.

SOUVENIR HUNTER RIPS BAR DOOR OFF

Big Bad John nightclub at the Strathcona Hotel lost one of its swinging doors Friday night when a seaman ripped it off to show it to his friends aboard the William J. Stewart research vessel.

Today Dale G. Philpotts pleaded guilty to theft under $50 and was fined $50 and ordered to pay $23 in damages.

"This may have been just a lark," said Judge E. D. Jorre de St. Jorre, "but the unhappy aspect about it is that a charge of theft is recorded against you."

Arthur Mayse . . .

IN A WORLD THAT seems hell-bent on dehumanizing itself, I suppose it's only a matter of time before Cassette University takes its place in our education system. As Social Credit MLA Herb Capozzi visions this electronic alma mater, it will impart learning by way of video tape and the television screen.

Since it would function without an expensive clutter of professors and instructors, such a university might well help reduce the cost of education, a word that I use loosely in this context.

But I'm not prepared to go along with Capozzi's claim that possession of such a university would make us Canada's top province in the education field. Substituting probability for wishful thinking, I suggest that what we'd get is trouble of the sort that dogs the impersonal approach to the learning process.

Far be it from me to downgrade the value of electronic aids to the modern teacher. Education — which is more than the stuffing of student minds with facts and figures — has acquired a new dimension through the judicious use of tape and screen. With their help, the teacher to whom they are available can do a more effective job of broadening horizons.

The mistake comes when those who would streamline education and reduce its costs pounce on these aids as substitutes for the live, on-the-scene teacher.

One MLA who has shown himself aware of the need for a direct student-teacher relationship is Frank Calder, NDP member for Atlin. At the same legislative sitting in which Capozzi urged an electronic university, Calder made an appeal of a different sort.

He asked that "human" teachers be sent to our hinterlands, their purpose to encourage correspondence school students who lost interest in their courses.

We have a good correspondence school setup in British Columbia. I've heard it praised numerous times by parents in remote areas who are grateful for its existence.

I know, too, that the department of education people who administer those courses often go beyond the call of duty in encouraging their pupils.

Even so, this remains substitution from necessity, to be used only where a meeting of teacher and student can't be achieved.

Expediency isn't always the most reliable of guides. And where education is concerned, the temptation to think in strict terms of expediency is better resisted.

The notion of an electronic college, or junior college, or school, is based on a dangerous fallacy. This is that students can be lumped together in the abstract, tabulated by body count, and dealt with by assembly-line methods that disregard the fact of the student as an individual.

Yet that fact can never be safely ignored, as multiversities afflicted by their very hugeness have discovered. Whatever other factors contribute to the student riots that have exploded on many a super-campus, this crowding out of individuality is one of the root causes.

I've never felt that our own school system is either as black as it's sometimes painted, or as good as it could be. But if it deals with canned education warily and preserves student-teacher contact jealously, I think it will remain in reasonable health.

Anyone who discounts the importance of that contact would do well to review his own years spent in pursuit of education.

What do you remember best — subject or teacher, or both as they relate to each other?

Unless I miss my guess, your answer will come out much as mine does when I tackle that question.

Close-linked with most of what I've learned through formal schooling and found of value in life, is a teacher who was also an educator.

One of those teachers, a professor at University of British Columbia when I had the luck to know him, died in Vancouver only a few days ago. His name was Logan . . . Dr. Harry Logan. His subject was Latin, which he taught with deceptive casualness and immaculate scholarship to a mixed bag of undergraduates.

I was not his best student, and have long since sloughed off much of what he tried to teach me. But not the respect for language and the sense of present man's debt to his predecessors on earth which he imparted to his students.

Perhaps an electronic university could also offer lasting gifts. Somehow, though, I doubt it.

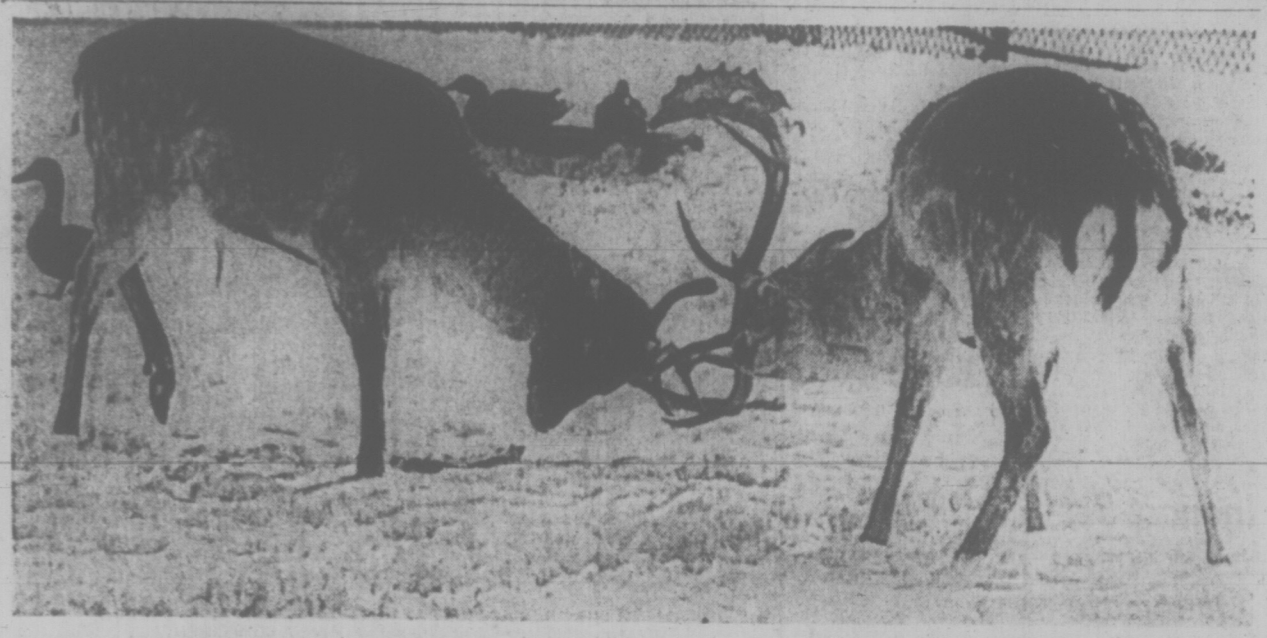
FOR MURDER OF LAPORTE

Rose Guilty, Gets Life Term



SPRING FEVER CONQUERS ALL, even snowy weather, as witness these bucks locking horns in a test battle Friday in Toronto's High Park. There was a hint of spring in the air with bright sunshine and temperatures in the 30s coming as welcome relief after a series of snowstorms which hit Ontario and Quebec this winter. (CP Wirephoto)

Could Be Free In 10 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Paul Rose was sentenced to life imprisonment today after being found guilty by a Court of Queen's Bench jury of the non-capital murder of Pierre Laporte.

The jury, which began deliberations briefly Friday, entered its verdict soon after resumption of court proceedings today, winding up the seven-week trial.

Rose, 27, would become eligible for parole after serving 10 years of his life term.

Rose is the first of four persons to be tried in the kidnapping of the Quebec labor minister last Oct. 10 and his strangulation death a week later.

The seven-week trial just concluded dealt with the non-capital murder charge only.

TAKES VERDICT CALMLY

The other three — Jacques Rose, 23, Paul's brother, Francis Simard, 23, and Bernard Lortie, 19 — are to face trial on similar charges at a later date.

Rose took the verdict calmly, as though he expected it.

As he left the courtroom between two policemen his parting comments were:

"Vive le Quebec libre, vive le peuple Quebecois, nous vaincrons."

In translation Rose's comments in English were: "Long live free Quebec, long live the Quebec people, we shall win."

When the 12-man jury filed into Court of Queen's Bench shortly after 10 a.m. today, Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols asked:

"Are you ready to continue your deliberations?"

TRIAL BEGAN JAN. 25

The jury foreman said: "We have reached a verdict."

The decision came after the foreman Friday had asked that deliberations be postponed until today because jurors were too tired to continue. That request came after the jury met for 25 minutes Friday.

After pronouncing the life sentence, Mr. Justice Nichols then sentenced Rose to one month for contempt of court.

Canadian Oil Corporation Seen Following Home Deal

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A multi-billion-dollar Canadian government international oil corporation could develop out of the planned acquisition of Home Oil Ltd. by the federal government, it was learned here today.

Ottawa hopes to block a United States takeover of control of Home Oil of Calgary by buying control in the company. Energy Minister J. J. Greene has disclosed in the Commons. Cost to the government of this purchase could run to $26,000,000 initially.

Out of this development may materialize the huge new Canadian government-controlled company. It would encompass Home Oil's production, exploration and pipeline assets, the government's interests in Panarctic oils, the refining capabilities of Polymer Corporation and elements of Eldorado Nuclear Limited.

The two federal Crown corporations, Polymer and Eldorado, are being consulted as the Canadian government proceeds with its negotiations to buy controlling interest of Home Oil. The directors of Panarctic are also being kept informed of the negotiations.

The bold new concept was presented to cabinet by Greene and despite some opposition he has apparently convinced the majority of the cabinet that this is the way to proceed. Sources close to cabinet said Saturday that the deal is now too far advanced to be stopped.

The Canada Development Corporation, to be established by legislation before Parliament, will participate in the formation of the giant Canadian oil company. It would act as the lynch-pin to combine elements of Crown corporations, Home Oil and the government's interests in Panarctic oils.

The bill creating the CDC is expected to be passed by Parliament this spring.

Leading the negotiations for the government in the purchase of Home Oil is Jack Austin, deputy minister of energy, mines and resources. He is conducting the talks with R. A. Brown Jr., president of Home Oil. He began negotiation to prevent the sale of Home Oil to Ashland Oil of Kentucky as early as June last year.

Pipeline Inevitable, Chretien Tells House

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien told the Commons Friday an Arctic pipeline is inevitable and that he will meet oil company executives within two weeks to lay down the conditions by which the line could be built through the Mackenzie Valley.

He and Energy Minister J. J. Greene will meet the presidents of the seven firms developing oil reserves on Alaska's north slope at Prudhoe Bay.

The Mackenzie Valley pipeline is the only alternative to the trans-Alaska pipeline, which would supply giant supertankers running from Valdez, Alaska, down the British Columbia coast to refineries in Washington.

Mr. Greene told the Commons the tanker route was "fraught with potential danger" from oil spills, and reiterated the government's preference for the Mackenzie Valley line.

But Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South) said the tanker route is inevitable. The Mackenzie line would also be likely as a secondary route.

U.S. PRESSED

Mr. Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister Edgar Benson, said the U.S. government is under strong domestic and international pressures to build the Alaska pipeline.

Turk Power Scramble On

ANKARA (Reuter) — President Cevdet Sunay called an emergency meeting of the Senate today as moves got under way to find a new Turkish government to replace that of Suleyman Demirel, forced out of power by army threats Friday.

After meeting the 183-member Senate, the 70-year-old president, who plans to address the country Sunday, arranged to talk with Gen. Memduh Tagmac, chief of the general staff.

The general was the man behind the armed forces threat Friday to take over the country if Demirel did not resign.

YOUNG SOLDIERS SENT HOME

Times News Services

BELFAST — Britain will withdraw about 170 troops under the age of 18 from Northern Ireland after the killing of three young off-duty soldiers this week

The order, to take effect as soon as possible, was announced Friday night by Defence Minister Lord Carrington. One of the three murdered soldiers was only 17, a second, his brother, 18, and a third, 23.

One report said the three were enticed from a saloon by girls working for the Irish Republican Army and were ambushed.

Police found their inquiries balked to a large extent by the fear of reprisals against informers instilled over the years into many sections of the population.

Tensions were high in Northern Ireland this week with fears of violence by Protestants seeking revenge against Roman Catholic districts. Leave was cancelled for most of the 8,000 British soldiers on peacekeeping operations here as the hunt for the murderers continued.

Indira, Marxists Locked in Battle

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party was locked in a close race today with the militant Marxist Communist party for control of the state assembly in violence-ridden West Bengal.

In the national parliamentary elections, Mrs. Gandhi moved toward a possible two-thirds majority that would enable her to pass constitutional amendments with ease. She has promised India's poor drastic economic and social reform.

"With the results from 183 of 277 constituencies counted in West Bengal, the Congress party had won 73 seats and the Marxists 70. The remaining 40 seats already decided were shared among 14 parties that will play a major role if a coalition government is formed in the state.

Mrs. Gandhi's party made a strong showing in Calcutta and in the northern part of the state, winning 32 seats more than it held after the last general election.

EXTENDS INFLUENCE

But the Marxists swept all but one of 23 seats in agricultural and industrial areas of Burdwan district, scene of some of the worst violence. The Marxist provincial leader, who is in jail charged with murder, retained his assembly seat.

The Marxist hold in rural areas long had been considered weak but its success in Burdwan showed the party has been able to extend its influence.

BANK ROBBERS USE HOSTAGE

Girl Safe After Kidnap

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Six-year-old Amy Larson was reunited with her family Friday night after being abducted from her home in the morning and spending six hours bound up in the back of a van truck.

"About all that she would say was that she was very comfortable," said Allen G. Larson, who said his daughter had been examined by doctors and was in fine shape.

Amy was abducted shortly before the bank her father manages was robbed. A man had phoned Larson and said Amy and her mother were being held as hostages.

J. Earl Milnes, agent in charge of the Seattle FBI office, said she was found bound and gagged in the truck in a supermarket parking lot in Juanita a few miles north of here. Both towns are Seattle suburbs.

AMY
. . . happy to be home

"The men didn't abuse her," Larson said. "She said she was cold and hungry.

"The men gave her a candy bar to eat during the day."

Two men went to the Larson home about 10:30 Friday morning and were admitted by Amy while her mother, Corrine Larson, was in another room, the King County public safety department said.

They tied Mrs. Larson up and left, police said, apparently taking the family's 1956 station wagon as well as a white van truck the men were believed to have arrived in.

The station wagon, belonging to the Larsons, was found a few blocks from the bank shortly after the robbery. Larson's wife was freed by police and officers said she apparently was unharmed, although she was described as "extremely upset."

OPERATION IN LAOS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese field officers said today that the major portion of the operation in Laos will end in about two weeks but that some troops will remain at border posts.

South Vietnamese troops that were pulled back from the key Ho Chi Minh Trail village of Sepone Friday were nearing the South Vietnam border today.

Pension Increase 'Paltry'

The debate was adjourned by Resources Minister Ray Williston after he indicated the government can't increase pensions for retired teachers without doing the same for retired civil servants and municipal employees.

The B.C. Teachers Federation has threatened a strike over the issue unless changes are made in the bill.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) said pension increases for retired teachers work out to a maximum of about $21.

"That's a pretty paltry sum when you consider how long people have worked," he said.

Cocke said the New Democrats welcome a number of proposed changes in the pension bill, including a reduction in the salary averaging period and a lifting of the earning ceiling.

But of the proposed increases for retired teachers, Cocke said: "This bill ignores the old people in this province ... this government is unprincipled in this regard."

Williston reviewed the history of the pension plans for teachers, civil servants and municipal employees, pointing out that government contributions had been made on a comparable basis for all three groups.

SOME ARE BETTER

In many cases the pensions for retired teachers are better than those for the others, he said, asserting that the government couldn't improve the position of retired teachers without doing the same for the others.

He indicated opposition to putting new drains on the pension fund, saying the teachers had had enough experience of drained funds in years past.

Cocke said the NDP supports both the civil service pension changes and those for the municipal employees, partly on the basis that those groups have indicated satisfaction with the proposals of the government.

The debate may continue in the legislature Monday.

Hearing Aid Bill Rapped By Opposition Parties

New Democrats and Liberals joined forces in the legislature Friday to oppose a government bill setting up a board for the regulation of the hearing-aid business.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) led the attack against the bill, which he said would set up an industry-controlled board with power to restrict competition and keep prices high.

His call for hearing aids to be included as a service under the medicare plan was supported by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer.

Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) said hearing aids for the elderly should eventually be a medicare item, but said there are higher priorities in health care.

The bill, described as unique in Canada by Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson, passed second reading by a 35-14 vote.

Dudley Little (SC—Skeena) said his personal experience with a hearing aid caused him to doubt the value of more competition for its own sake. The highly specialized needs of the hard-of-hearing requires more skilled medical advice rather than more selling pressure, he said.

New Democrats said they weren't doubting the need for better standards in the industry, which the bill is designed to enforce.

"Give me one example of where a sort of closed shop, pseudo-professional society has lowered its prices ..." said Bill Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet).

Macdonald said good hearing devices could be imported from Japan at great savings and made available to people who need them, instead of putting industry control in the hands of "a cosy trade association."

Socreds defended the bill, saying the opposition members should know better than to doubt that Mrs. Dawson, who introduced the bill, would do other than protect the rights of elderly persons who are most subject to exploitation in the hearing-aid business.

ORGANIZED CRIME INVASION FEARED

Fear that organized crime is about to invade B.C. was raised in the legislature Friday during discussion of a bill that would require registration of mortgage brokers and full disclosures of mortgage costs.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the bill didn't provide for disclosure of the "true owners" of mortgage brokerage corporations.

He said the names of Panamanian or Bahamian corporations would mean nothing to the public.

"How can you protect yourself against an unknown enemy?" he asked.

Macdonald said organized crime and the Mafia were being attracted to British Columbia because of "usurious interest rates" in the province.

"They're going to increase and the invasion will be on in B.C."

He urged the government to "force the real owners to stand up."

BARRETT
... back in House

MLA Thump Welcomes NDP Chief

Opposition leader Dave Barrett (NDP — Coquitlam) returned to the legislative assembly Friday to desk-thumping applause from both sides of the house and a welcome from Premier Bennett.

"I am very happy as house leader to welcome the leader of the opposition back to the house," Bennett rose to say after the applause had died.

Pre-Marital Counselling, Six-Week Wait Urged

He made the suggestion during a brief discussion of a bill, introduced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, which proposed revision of the marriage act.

The revision, Loffmark said, would change the present waiting period of three full days following registration of a marriage to three days including the registration day.

Barrett, who stressed he was making personal comments, said he thought the legislation might be "a step back."

He said the state dealt with marriage and divorce and it should provide pre-marital counselling because this was a function of the family that has been abdicated in modern times.

"Marriage can be an impetuous move," he said, and urged the government "to see that the opportunity for serious thought" was provided.

"Love is a great thing. I wouldn't want to knock it."

But he said if the state provided a six-week waiting period with pre-marital counselling, "some of the marriages that now contribute to the divorce rate of one out of three would not have taken place."

"If the state presumes to interfere at either end of the marriage," he said, it should provide counselling services.

Further discussion was adjourned until next sitting of the house.

BUYER PROTECTED

Changes in the provincial Consumer Protection Act were approved in principle by the legislature Friday, but not before a Socred MLA suggested the government should have as much concern for cash-paying customers as for credit-buyers.

George Mussallem (SC — Dewdney) said he approved of the bill's increased protection for people who buy on time, but added:

"Who holds the hand of the man that pays cash? Let us not be too particular about the man who pays on time to buy more than he can afford."

The bill ensures that in cases where a time-payment contract is sold by a retailer to a finance company, the finance company is required to stand behind all the guarantees and other obligations in the contract.

Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) reminded Mussallam that people who can afford to pay cash don't have any problem with assigned contracts and can go directly to the seller for satisfaction on goods received.
